YUGOSLAVIA NOW EUROPE'S SECOND FRONT

King Transfers High Command Back To Homeland From Cairo.

ZERO HOUR NEARS

Albanian, Greek and Rumanian Guerrillas Join In Planned Offensive.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Yugoslavia became a second front in Europe today with Gen. Draka Mikhailovitch leader of a Yugoslav guerilla army now estimated to number 250 000, as its commander-in-chief

The Yugoslav military cabinet in exile announced that King Peter, now in the United States, had transferred the seat of the high command from Cairo to somewhere in Yugoslavia

At the same time Mikhailovitch was told by radio that he had been named chief of staff in Yugoslavia.

Mikhailovitch already was minister of war in the Yugoslav cabinet. Now he has the whole administrative and military command in his hands

"It is a sign that the zero hour is approaching and that the high command is preparing the people of Yugoslavia to rise against the common enemy," the military cabinet said

It was reported here that guerrillas in Albania, Greece and even Rumania have joined in secretly-planned and co-ordinated offensive against Axis garrisons and supply lines in an attempt to form a second front and aid Russia by compelling the Germans to divert men from the east.

Mikhailovitch's own offensive, which is becoming more important daily, is part of a comprehensive plan for a general anti-Axis uprising in the Balkans when the zero hour comes

The guerrillas are aided in their underground movements in Hungary and Bulgaria, those people are for Russia and not the Axis.

Reports reached London that intrepid patriot bands, numbering from a handful of neighbors up to forces the size of a small army, are battling Italian troops in Croatia, Bosnia and Montenegro, as well as in Serbia.

Axis reports have admitted that the Italians have 300,000 troops in Yugoslavia, supposed to have been crushed a year ago

In an attempt to crush patriot resistance, the Germans have warned that for every German killed a Yugoslavia village will be wiped out.

City's New Traffic Violation Tickets To Be 'Fix Proof'

Those little yellow tickets given to Mansfield traffic violators are undergoing some changes but motorists will still have to pay fines to get rid of them, especially since Traffic Commissioner Frend C Boals insists that the new tickets will be 'fix-proof."

Commissioner Boals said today that the form for tickets was being changed to allow simplification of the task of keeping records on tickets issued

"In saying that these tickets are fix-proof," said Boals, "I don't mean that the old ones could be fixed, but the new tickets will be issued to traffic patrolmen in book form and there will be a closer check on them than there was when the tickets were issued by the batch."

Boals said that the ticket placed on the violator's car will be similar to the ones being used at

ARMY AND NAVY AIRMEN ARRIVE

20 To Begin Flight Training at Mansfield Airport; Stay at City's Armory.

First group of 20 enlisted men will begin flight training at Municipal airport Monday under the Civil Aeronautics administration's modified Civilian Pilot training program.

The group represents 10 Navy reserves and 10 army air force enlistees, all of which will be given eight weeks of elementary instruction, James R. Harrington, airport manager, said.

Navy reservists arrived at the field yesterday. Army enlistees are scheduled to arrive here tomorrow. Additional enlistees from both branches of the service are expected to be sent here as soon as civilian pilots now in training graduate.

The youths will be housed temporarily in the armory, Harrington said. Plans are under way to move several of the MARYSVILLE — (UP) — Ezra Miller, 24-year-old New California farmer who confessed he kidnaped his unmarried sister's three-week-old baby and abandoned it on the doorstep of a Springfield war worker, may be given a mental examination, police said today.

Miller told police he kidnaped the child to "get it out of the house and stop all of the talk that was going around." The baby was found in a box on the doorstep of Henry Brecht, Springfield.

PUBLIC GIVEN 2 STATEMENTS ABOUT TRIAL

President of Commission Reveals 7 Witnesses on Stand in 2 Days.

GUARDSMEN TESTIFY

Woman Who Jilted Saboteur When She Learned Plans Also at Hearing.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Eight would-be-saboteurs — perhaps the vanguard of scores that Adolf Hitler plans to send to this country — today heard more testimony that soon may send them before a firing squad or to the gallows

It was the third day of their trial before a special military commission appointed by President Roosevelt. As on the preceding days, what went on was a secret, guarded by oath, soldiers and machine guns.

The secrecy was lifted to some extent yesterday by two announcements from the improvised trial room. In one, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, president of the commission, declared that proceedings were secret because they involve "the security of the United States and lives of its soldiers, sailors and citizens."

He revealed that seven witnesses had testified in the first two days of the trial, and added:

"Each of these witnesses, as well as all other persons present in the courtroom, except the prisoners, have been placed under oath not to reveal any part of the proceedings unless and until authorized by competent authority. Violation of this oath is punishable by contempt."

The witnesses, it was believed, were the most damning the government could produce. Among them were coast guardsmen whose vigilance helped to frustrate the diabolically laid plot federal bureau of investigation counter-espionage agents who tracked them down and Mrs. Freda Melind of Chicago.

Pretty Mrs. Melind, 24, a widow, was the fiancee of 22-year-old Herbert Hans Haupt, one of the defendants. Shortly

GIVES WARNING

Norris Says Axis Must Be Watched For 50 Years.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Sen. George W. Norris, (Ind., Nebr.), veteran liberal member of congress, proposed today on the eve of his 81st birthday that the United Nations prepare to watch Germany, Italy and Japan for "at least 50 years" after this war to guarantee against rearming.

"Norris, one of the "little group of wilful men" who opposed United States' entrance into World War I, said in an interview:

"The peace terms of this war must include complete and total disarmament of Germany, Italy and Japan. Every vestigate of armament in those nations must be destroyed, including the factories that are capable of producing those armaments."

Rubber Drive Ends Tonight, Plans Made for 2 New Ones

With the scrap rubber collection coming to a close tonight, plans were announced today for two new campaigns to gather up other scrap articles—waste cooking fat and phonograph records.

The indication today was that Richland county's scrap rubber heap would total approximately 500,000 pounds—250 tons. This is 50 tons higher than the original quota set for the county, but 44 tons short of the second quota established when county collection committees throughout the country were asked to try for a total of eight pounds per person in their localities.

C. L. Hartenfels, chairman of the Richland county rubber collection committee, reported that yesterday's collection of 10,369 pounds brought the total to date to 463,212 pounds. He expressed belief that today's collection would carry the total near to 500,000 pounds.

Collection of household fats to be used in explosives manufacture will start Monday, with Clark L. Stough as chairman in Richland county.

Tells How 15 Men Gave Up Lifeboat to Wounded

Seaman Reveals Only Four Survived Pounding Seas In Heroic Act After Coral Sea Battle.

(By United Press)

SAN FRANCISCO—Fifteen men, survivors from a bombed U. S. Navy tanker in the Coral sea, willingly went overboard from their lifeboat to make room for wounded comrades, it was disclosed today.

Only four survived the pounding seas, but the wounded were rescued

The story of courage and sacrifice was told here by Ed A. Flaherty, 22, electricians mate third class from St Louis, Mo, and Douglas J. Nelson, 22, signalman third class from Laurel, Mont.

Both men previously were aboard a cruiser but were transferred to the Neosho as "passengers." Flaherty received severe burns in the bombing of the Neosho. Nelson was uninjured, and was placed in charge of a group of wounded

"The wounded," said Flaherty, "were taken into two whaleboats. The boats were extremely overcrowded. Lt. Henry Bradford ordered every unwounded man overboard to shift for himself. The lieutenant

Army Says Chicago Hotel Could House 20,000 Persons.

CHICAGO—(INS)—Some idea of the immensity of the 3,000-room Stevens hotel, which, with the Congress hotel, the army is taking over as a reception center for air force cadets, was given today by Jay Jones, general manager.

While the largest number of guests ever registered there was 5,700 one night in August, 1933, during the Century of Progress exposition, Jones said the army by installing additional cots and double-deck bunks could swell the capacity to nearly 20,000 persons.

Seventy-five telephone operators are required to handle its switchboard, more than required by a city of 25,000 population The hotel uses more water, steam and electricity than suburban Oak Park, a town of 65,000 population.

TRY TO BLOCK HENDERSON ON PRICE CHECK

Senators Seek to Prevent Ceiling on Canned Vegetables and Bread.

FARMERS COMPLAIN

Organizations Say Prices of Basic Crops Are Kept Down.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Members of a senate appropriations sub-committee were reported fashioning today a financial straitjacket which might keep Price Administrator Leon Henderson from blocking sharp increases in the prices of such staple commodities as bread and canned vegetables.

Likely to be offered in the form of a limitation the proposal would prohibit the use of any of this year's OPA operating funds to place ceilings on processed agricultural articles that did not reflect the 110 per cent of parity fixed by congress as the lowest point at which Henderson could step in and control prices.

Senator Thomas D-Okla) said an amendment of this nature was certain to be offered to the $1,808,000,000 supplemental appropriations bill now before the committee

The committee has heard complaints this week from farm organizations that in his efforts to curb rising living costs Henderson has ruled that bread, for instance, does not fall within the field where congress prescribed the administrator's authority.

Henderson has made no attempt to control the price of wheat, since it remains below 110 per cent of parity, a figure calculated to give farmers a return equal to that of a past period, usually 1909-14

But the farm representatives were said to have protested that ceilings placed on bread and other such processed commodities ignored a section of the price control act which states that prices fixed for processed articles must reflect the 110 per cent parity figure. The result was, they argued, that the prices of basic

Civic Movement Helped Newark to Get Big U. S. Plant

Selection of a site near Newark for a $22,000,000 aluminum plant was due, at least in part, to numerous trips to Washington by Mayor Arthur D. Lockwood and other city officials of Newark, it was learned today.

Mayor Lockwood, Service Director Samuel A. Anderson, and Harry W. Arnold, president of the Chamber of Commerce, made a number of trips to the capital in an effort to obtain a war plant to relieve the city's unemployment situation.

Frank Elliott, secretary of the city's Chamber of Commerce, said his group had received the constant support and co-operation of Mayor Lockwood and city council, as well as AFL and CIO labor groups and the Retail Merchants' association.

Soviets Battle New Thrust At Vital Railway

Furious Fighting Develops on Eastern Bank of River; Russians Say Assaults Beaten Off; British Squeeze Axis Troops In Desert Trap.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies have swept across the upper Don river at several points, Soviet dispatches acknowledged today, while the Red armies are battling a dangerous new thrust into the Rossosh sector 100 miles south of Voronezh on the Moscow-Rostov railway.

The Nazi advance across the upper Don, 10 miles west of Voronezh, came after the Russians reported they had beaten off a series of violent assaults and inflicted bloody losses on the enemy.

Front-line dispatches said furious battles were developing on the east bank of the river as the Germans attempted to widen their wedges into Red army defense lines.

The bulk of the fourth German tank army was said to be massed on the west bank to reinforce the offensive against Voronezh

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters declared broadly that Russian forces in retreat were being pursued "on a broad front" in the south—evidently referring to the Voronezh and Rossosh sectors

"Local resistance was broken," the Nazi command asserted 'Enemy attacks supported by tanks to relieve pressure northwest of Voronezh broke down with heavy casualties."

The Nazi high command still failed to reiterate its claim, however, that Voronezh had fallen.

Dispatches to Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, said the fighting had swelled to a gigantic scale, with the Germans pouring in masses of fresh reserves and tanks. Russian estimates had previously declared the Nazi grand offensive was powered by 1,000,000 troops

"Conditions west of Voronezh are becoming more complicated," Red Star said.

Front-line dispatches said the Russians withdrew in good order toward Rossosh to avoid being flanked, but conceded that the invaders had penetrated into Russian defenses in depth

While vast battles raged over the Don steppes for control of the vital rail line to the Caucasus, Red Star said an important Red army counter-attack to relieve pressure on Voronezh was threatening the German left flank.

"Stubborn battles there may have a serious influence over the position near Voronezh," the newspaper said.

It did not disclose the scene of the Soviet counter-blow, but Hitler's headquarters said the Russians were attacking with strong infantry and tank forces north and northwest of Orel, a major German base, 165 miles northwest of Voronezh.

The Nazi command said the Russians were driven back after a hard battle and declared Nazi counter-attacks "sealed off" local breaches the Russians had made.

Red Star said the situation at Rossosh was "very difficult" with the battle developing full force near the city.

Rossosh lies 200 miles due north of Rostov, gateway to the Caucasus, and within 235 miles of

PHOPHECY: Midway Account To Show Greater U. S. Triumph

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Anticipating a final accounting of Japanese losses in the battle of Midway, naval sources asserted today the official summary may show it was an even greater victory for the United States than the Coral sea fight, and possibly was a crippling blow to Nippon's so-called invincible navy

The navy's complete report on the mid-Pacific battle is expected momentarily, and indications are that the final tabulation will show the scope of the American success was greater than reports from Hawaii have indicated to date and that because of this setback, Japan may be forced to change her whole future invasion strategy

Ever since the battle, which occurred the first week in June, semi-official reports from Honolulu set the Nipponese ship losses as high as 21 warships and auxiliary vessels sunk and damaged, including at least four regular aircraft carriers destroyed.

While the total figure may not vary greatly, it is expected that a number of ships previously listed as damaged will be in the "sunk" class. In addition, it must be pointed out that others still carried as damaged possibly went to the bottom before they reached Nipponese bases.

High military and naval officials, however, have warned Americans against becoming complacent over the success at Midway, because the Nipponese still may be capable of gathering a force for another desperate blow in the Hawaiian area, the Aleutians or Australia.

In the Coral sea and Midway battles American forces apparently "pulled the teeth" from Japan's fleet by destroying five to seven first-line aircraft carriers with their complements of planes.

The Nipponese still are believed to have a fairly large fleet of small, converted carriers, but these in no way compare with the huge "floating airports" destroyed

REPORT: Sen. Lodge Describes Experiences In Desert Warfare

(Editor's Note. Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) has just returned from Libya where, as a reserve major on active army duty, he was a member of the first American tank detachment to meet the Germans in the field. In the following dispatch he reveals that the detachment put nine enemy tanks out of action, and describes some of the features of desert warfare.)

By SEN. HENRY CABOT LODGE
Major, U. S. Army Reserve
(Written for the United Press)

WASHINGTON—From my experience in Libya, I can say that the United States medium tank, the General Grant, is a good weapon. Our American tank detachment, mounted in these tanks, accounted for about nine enemy tanks.

It has good armor protection and a gun that is not outranged by the enemy's guns, and gives the soldier a good chance to get in a wallop.

It is mechanically satisfactory. To be sure, it is susceptible of certain improvements that already have been incorporated in the new model. The General Grant gave a good account of itself in the engagement in which the great industrial city of Stalingrad, on the lower Volga.

NAZIS FORCE WAY TO EAST BANK OF DON

Soviets Battle New Thrust at Railway; British Squeeze Desert Trap.

Fighting under the slogan "not one more step backward," hundreds of thousands of Red army veterans and reserves were reported struggling to check the double-barreled Nazi offensive in the greatest battle of 1942.

A Red army bulletin acknowledging the Germans had reached the vicinity of Rossosh indicated Gen. Fedor von Bock's armies had scored a 90-mile advance eastward from Kupyansk and presumably cut the vital rail line between Russia's central and southern armies.

Against the somber background of the Soviet campaign, the 17-day-old battle of Egypt brought more heartening news for the United Nations. British imperial headquarters indicated that Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck was slowly squeezing the Axis invaders into a potential death trap.

A Cairo communique said British flying columns, hacking at the right flank of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's armored forces, had compelled the enemy to retreat north toward the Mediterranean sea coast west of El Alamein.

Thus, bit by bit, the British appeared to be narrowing Rommel's escape corridor. Dispatches from Cairo several days ago said Gen. Rommel, with his armies exhausted by their 350-mile sweep across the desert from Tobruk, was attempting to build a "wall" to guard his southern flank against British attacks which might ultimately cut off his supply lines. Rommel meanwhile was confronted with growing British strength in the critical struggle for the Nile and the Suez canal.

"In the southern sector, our mobile columns engaged enemy forces, including tanks, and forced them to move northward," British headquarters announced.

Dispatches from Cairo doubted that Rommel might be forced to execute a general withdrawal, but said the British were confident they could keep the Axis leader so busy fighting off flanking thrusts that he could not regroup his columns for a new offensive.

Cairo observers said Rommel apparently hoped to avoid a showdown battle for two or three weeks to rest his troops, receive reinforcements and rebuild his striking power.

On the Russian front, Red army headquarters acknowledged a perilous situation at Rossosh as the Germans struck ever closer to the Caucasus, but declared that huge Nazi losses had "compelled the Hitlerite clique to withdraw considerable forces from France and dispatch them to the east."

Viewed from another standpoint, this may have been a new hint to the British to create a "second front" in western Europe as Hitler drained strength from his English channel defenses to support the costly drive into southern Russia.

Soviet Planes Hit Nazi Air Bases

MOSCOW—(AP)—Bombing German airdromes in northern Norway and Finland, the Red air force has inflicted heavy new damage on the bases from which German planes have been raiding ports and shipping of the Arctic supply line to Russia, warfront dispatches reported today.

The raids followed the Russia torpedoing of the powerful German battleship Tirpitz as it led a cruiser and destroyer force in an attempted attack on an Allied convoy bringing Russia supplies from England and the United States, the Russia accounts said.

A strong German air fleet based in northern Norway and Finland repeatedly has struck at such convoys and at Murmansk and other cities through which American and British arms are flowing to the Red army.

Von Brauchitsch Again Heads Armies

LONDON — (INS) — General Field Marshal Walther Von Brauchitsch has again taken over direction of the military campaign in Russia after the German high command forced Adolf Hitler to reinstate him as commander-in-chief of the German army, it was reported today.

In a dispatch from Stockholm the London Daily Mail said that persons arriving in the Swedish capital from Berlin reported Hitler "unofficially" forfeited active command of the German armies in Russia.

The German Chancellor relieved Von Brauchitsch of his command last December when he decided to display his own military prowess at the Russian front.

The much-heralded Hitler "intuition" proved a dismal flop when he injected his personal military strategy and the Nazis suffered a series of severe reverses shortly after he took over.

British Attacking Rear Positions

ROME — (By Official Italian Wireless)—(INS)—The Italian high command admitted today that British armored scouting cars were attacking the rear of the Axis positions in Egypt.

While the high command failed to disclose what damage was inflicted by the British sorties, it was said that artillery duels between the British imperials and the Axis continues.

Some small British motor lorries, it was claimed, were destroyed or put out of action in machine gun attacks by planes.

Claim U. S. Cruiser Dive-Bombed

LONDON—(INS)—The German radio, according to Reuters (British) news agency, today quoted alleged statements of survivors of three German bombing planes which were reported to have made suicide dives onto the deck of a United States cruiser, tearing the ship apart.

The Nazi report claimed that the attacked cruiser was among warships guarding a convoy en route to the Russian port of Murmansk.

The German fliers were quoted as saying that hundreds of men were drowned when a terrific explosion tore the ship apart.

It was not explained how the Germans returned to tell the tale.

Hitler's headquarters on Tuesday claimed in a communique that a heavy American cruiser was sunk along with 28 other vessels when German air and naval forces attacked a British-American convoy bound for Russia. The following day it was asserted four more ships were sunk in subsequent attacks.

Report 13 Million Nazis on Red Front

MOSCOW — (INS) — The Red army today issued a pamphlet in which it was computed that the Germans are using 13,000,000 men on the Russian front.

It was estimated that German casualties so far amounted to 27 per cent of the total, or approximately 3,510,000.

TOLL MOUNTS IN TROLLEY CRASH

11th Victim Dies in Hospital of Injuries received in Accident.

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — (INS) — Death toll in the collision of two Lehigh Valley transit trolleys on Wednesday rose to 11 today when Jacob Hollenbach, 27, of Norristown, succumbed from multiple injuries in Montgomery hospital.

Seventeen other persons injured in the head-on crash near Norristown remained in two hospitals. Attaches said they expected at least three more deaths.

Investigating authorities meanwhile revealed that Motorman Henry H. Strunk, 42, of Allentown, failed to obey orders to pull into a siding shortly before the trolleys collided. Strunk was killed at his post, while the other motorman, Grover Meckley, 54, also of Allentown, was held without bail.

present but that the stub retained by the patrolmen will be much smaller and will have more concise information.

At present, the traffic tickets are issued in duplicate, the patrolman retaining a twin of the ticket given the violator. Under the new system, the patrolman will enter his information on a small stub which will be retained in a book containing 10 tickets.

Boals said that the traffic squad had on hand about 500 of the old-style tickets which will be used before the new ones are put into use.

The traffic commissioner also announced that another violation ticket is being prepared to issue to motorists having autos with faulty lights.

He said that motorists having faulty lights will be given a violation ticket, informing them that they must have the lights repaired within 48 hours. Failure to comply with the order will result in a warrant being issued for the motorist's arrest, according to Boals.

Commissioner Boals said that traffic patrolmen usually request motorists to have their lights fixed immediately but that this practice could not be continued because most service stations are closed at night.

Motorists having lights repaired must return the notice given them to police headquarters with the signature of the garage man or service station attendant doing the repair work.

in the two battles.

That the navy has spent a month checking and rechecking battle reports indicates the care with which American officials compile such summaries to avoid possible duplication in case two pilots claimed destruction of the same enemy vessel.

In contrast, the Japanese, following the Coral sea battle, claimed the sinking and damaging of a dozen or more United Nations warships, when as a matter of fact only the U. S. aircraft carrier Lexington, one destroyer and a naval tanker were lost.

LODGE REPORTS ON DESERT WAR

Senator Praises U. S. Medium Tank, Cites Value of Compass.

our soldiers took part. The fact that they took part in the fighting and came out without casualties is proof of that.

The men handled themselves well. They were cagey, well-trained, and good shots. In fact, the lesson we learned from our experience is that the training the army is giving our soldiers over here is sound. It really equips them for battle.

Our soldiers were ordered to pick the nearest enemy tank and keep firing at it until they put it out of action. In this way they knocked out about nine of the enemy.

One of the most important items of equipment in handling tanks in desert warfare is a compass. It is easy to get lost in that country. It plays strange tricks on the eye.

Sometimes, for example, you will see a ridge ahead of you on which there is an Arab tomb. You sight it and drive on, and after 10 minutes the whole thing disappears. You continue by compass and the tomb and the ridge come back into view.

Without a compass it is sometimes impossible to find your way out and back to where the army is serving chow.

Our men had the regular equipment when we arrived on our mission, which was to get battle experience and come back and instruct others. We left for the front in a cattle train.

I cannot tell what happened after we got to the front because the experience I got I received as an army officer, and belongs to the army.

My personal equipment consisted of the regulation khaki uniform, a garrison cap with a brim—although once you have your earphones on, inside the tank, can't wear headkear—a .45 calibre revolver, emergency rations, a first aid kit, and a compass.

Our food consisted of canned corn beef, crackers, rather salty water, and tea. Eating during a battle is a matter of grabbing some crackers when you have a chance, and of course sleep is intermittent. Occasionally some of the personnel can get catnaps during lulls in the fighting, when you have found some concealment.

"The collection of household fats is pretty much the housewife's job," said Stough. "The war production board, which states that two billion pounds of kitchen fats are now wasted each year, estimates that each family should save one to two pounds per month.

"Two pounds of kitchen fat contain enough glycerine to fire five anti-tank shells. Glycerine also is used to make signal rockets, recoil mechanism, demolition charges, and other military equipment. Substitutes must be found because the Pacific war has reduced imports of fats and oils from the Far East."

The housewife is to take the waste cooking fat from her household to her neighborhood meat dealer, Stough said. Arrangements are being worked out as to other details of the collection, and these will be announced later. The price to be paid for the fat also will be established later.

As for general suggestions, Stough asked housewives to place pan drippings and other kitchen fats in a clean, wide-mouthed can after straining them to remove foreign matter, to keep them in a refrigerator, and to take no less than a pound at a time to their meat dealers.

Capt. Stahl said that the Legion's drive for 21,900 records would start with a house-to-house canvass on July 20 by Mansfield Boy Scouts. Throughout the two weeks of the campaign persons with records of any kind, including the old-fashioned cylinders, may bring them to the city's four fire stations, the Legion home, County Civilian Defense office at the courthouse, and Peck's station at Marion and Sherman.

Plans are being worked by Stahl's committee for collection throughout the county, except for Shelby, where the Legion post will sponsor the collection, aided by the fire department and three Boy Scout troops.

BUILD EVIDENCE AGAINST SPIES DURING TRIAL

Public Given Two Statements on Proceedings; General Explains Secrecy.

after a submarine landed him in this country, he rushed to Chicago and asked her to marry him. She accepted him, and then jilted him when she heard what he was up to.

FBI Chief Edgar Hoover, who is assisting the prosecution, suggested in a radio broadcast last night that the men on trial were the vanguard of a sabotage army. Which Hitler plans to commission, direct and send to the United States.

"Had they been successful in their plans, they could have stilled the machines and endangered the lives of thousands of defense workers," he said.

The prosecution, led by Attorney General Francis Biddle, was believed to have sought separate trials for the defendants, but counsel for the defense, it was understood, succeeded in convincing the commission of seven generals that the interests of justice would better be served by a mass trial. One reason Biddle wanted separate trials, it was said, was that he felt each prisoner might talk more if not confronted at trial with the co-saboteurs.

The first announcement by General McCoy yesterday, revealing the time the commission convened for the second day, came shortly after Elmer Davis, director of the office of war information, conferred with Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, reportedly in an effort to obtain daily reports of the trial's progress. Davis, before the trial opened, had promised such announcements.

Student Faces Death Penalty For Spying

NEW YORK—(INS)—Thoroughly schooled in the Nazi technique of spying, a 29-year-old German-born American faced possible death today because he turned his back on his father's adopted country and sought to betray the United States.

He is Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr, brilliant 29-year-old student who was arrested on espionage charges during the exhaustive search and questioning of regugees who recently arrived in this country aboard the diplomatic ship Drottningholm.

It was not until 500 of the liner's 942 passengers had been questioned that federal agents fell upon the Buffalo, N. Y., exchange student who, while studying in Germany, succumbed to the lure of Nazi agents and became schooled in Germany's espionage system.

When his education in this shady work was completed, the Nazis provided him with $7,000 in U. S. currency and the proper credentials and headed him for America to secure and transmit back to Germany information on the American war effort and military affairs.

Bahr's arrest and confession, according to federal agents, disclosed the elaborate preparations the Nazis made for protection of their spies. Bahr, scholarly and neat appearing, is perhaps the most intelligent of the nine German spies picked up within the past month.

As a German-born naturalized American citizen, Bahr may be tried under the espionage law which carries a death sentence for conviction, or under articles of war as a spy invading the United States, legal authorities said. If tried under the articles of war, it was pointed out, it would mean an army trial similar to the one now being given the eight Nazi saboteurs captured by the FBI after they were landed on the eastern coast by Nazi submarines.

Mother Believes Spy-Son Innocent

BUFFALO, N. Y.—(INS)— Grief-stricken by the news that her son, Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr was in federal custody as a German spy, Mrs. Minnie Bahr insisted in her belief that the 29-year-old German-trained espionage agent was innocent.

"I can't believe it! I can't believe my boy is a spy," the gray-haired woman repeated over and over again.

Also amazed by the news was Bahr's younger brother, George, an employe at the local Curtiss Wright Aircraft plant, who spells his name Baehr.

George said the last he and his mother heard from Herbert was late in 1939 when they received a letter from him stating that he wanted to finish studies at Hanover university. The family confirmed the FBI statement that Bahr had left this country for Germany the year before.

went first and 14 enlisted men followed him.

"The lieutenant and three others later were saved. The rest drowned. The sea was very rough and it must have been tough swimming."

Flaherty said the fight started for them on May 6. Two waves of Japanese planes made level bombing runs and two more waves dived. Between 30 and 40 planes participated in each attack.

"The big horizontal planes dropped bombs," he said, "but they missed. When the dive bombers started to work they got the tanker aft and amidships.

"The bomb amidships struck the fireroom where I was stationed. I was burned from head to toe. Nelson was my shipmate for two years but he said he didn't recognize me the next day."

Flaherty said he somehow made his way to the "fantail" and that someone gave him a cigaret. Then he went into the lifeboat which Bradford and the others abandoned to make room for the wounded.

The Neosho did not sink completely until a destroyer came alongside several days later, removed remaining survivors and put a torpedo into her. The destroyer took the survivors to Australia.

GALION PUPILS MAKE GARDENS, SEEK CREDITS

Students in Home Economics Maintain Projects at Homes.

GALION — Several victory gardens here will be sprouting grade cards by the end of July, at least those which are projects of several students who are working for credits in home economics.

Four students under the supervision of Miss Helen Smith, high school home economics instructor, have chosen vegetable gardens as their summer project in order to obtain additional school credit in that department.

Florence Lowe, Belva Stinehelfer and Ruth Ganshorn are already picking vegetables which were begun before the end of the school term. May Baker is nursing along a field of watermelons, in the hope of rivaling her father's muskmelon patch. Flower gardens were the hobby chosen by Letha Kellog, although several of the other students added floral borders to their vegetable crops.

Farming doesn't seem to be the only choice as summer projects however, for two students, Edna Carls and Aldene Wolfe have sanded, and painted, scraped and sewed as they completely remodeled their own rooms at home. Miss Smith reported that the projects showed originality and planning.

All work is planned to be completed by July 30, at which time the students will receive ¼ credit for their achievement providing it is successful in the eyes of the supervisor. The entire program is supported under the state-wide Smith-Hughes system and it is necessary for all students to submit a written report on each project along with their achievements.

The ninth grade class is required to submit three projects, all of which must be finished between October and the end of the following July. Tenth, 11th and 12th grades have four projects within the year's time. The complete school term plus the summer work gives one credit and a quarter toward graduation.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1942.

When you hear squealing tires as a car turns the corner, take a look at the driver—you were right, it's his dad's car.

There's an idea going around that it's "unlucky" to be caught driving a car on which no "use tax" stamp is displayed.

Walter Millis, writer on American history, has a thought worth noting: "Too many of us think that minor inconveniences are the same thing as sacrifice."

Sugar Users Get Sweet Bonus

TODAY is the day your No. 7 sugar rationing coupon starts entitling you to buy two additional pounds of sugar—a bonus, they call it, but in reality it is a plan designed to relieve warehouse space of some of the tremendous sugar surplus that has accumulated since the start-off of rationing, and is a much pleasanter "out" than frankly saying, "We made a mistake."

Never mind about the No. 6 coupon, over which No. 7 takes precedence. You've already been told that No. 6 will entitle you to buy two pounds of sugar in the four weeks period between July 27 and August 22, but you'd better be getting your allotment under the No. 5 coupon, if you haven't already done so, as that one went into effect June 28 and expires July 25.

Coupon No. 7 can be turned in any time between now and August 22, for the extra two pounds—but if you want to be helpful in cutting down the present surplus and making room for additional sugar storage you'll take up your bonus allotment as soon as possible—and if a hundred million other sugar users do the same that will relieve refinery and wholesale warehouses to the extent of around 100,000 tons—which will be a considerable help.

Recommends First and Last Stanzas

OH SAY, can you see, by the dawn's early light," will be immediately recognized as the opening line of "The Star Spangled Banner," and a majority of Americans are probably also familiar with the entire first verse of the national anthem, which is now being played and sung on all sorts of occasions.

But that isn't all of "The Star Spangled Banner." There are other verses, and it is suggested by Frank Damrosch, jr., that Americans also memorize the last stanza and that both be used at public gatherings, instead of only the first, which Mr. Damrosch says, by itself "is almost meaningless, and ends on a very dubious note."

So, for those who may not have it handy, here's the last verse, which, it will be noticed, ends in much more optimistic vein:

O thus be it ever, when free men shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation!
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto, "In God is our trust!"
And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Willing Givers To Navy Relief

THE WAY in which residents of Mansfield and Richland county made contributions $1,369 in excess of the $6,300 quoto set for the Navy Relief campaign evidences public understanding of the fine work that is being done by the national organization devoted to giving emergency aid to dependents of men in the navy, and also provides further convincing proof of the willingness of people in this city and county to share in supporting war activities to the extent of their ability.

An unusual phase of this particular drive is that it was carried to successful completion by the committee of which Harry S. Black was chairman without house-to-house or employe solicitation, which indicates the ready response of those who volunteered or were invited to make a contribution.

It is also typical of Shelby, in that city's part of the campaign, under direction of Walter Van Horn, that its goal of $1,300 was reached very quickly.

Home-Building By Installments

WITH labor and materials scarce and demands for shelter rising, many minds are at work on the knotty problems involved. Some interesting solutions have been produced, one of the latest to appear being the partly-finished house. Different forms of these houses come from different localities—interesting plans from St. Louis, Lansing, Mich., Miami, and Chicago.

One called the Crain house, from its designer, comes from Texas. This starts with one large room. Unlike the pioneer houses, which started with a small room and then added on, and on, this one is set upon a lot of the right size for the future. It is built and sold as one large room, with two rows of studding down the center. Windows are permanent, wiring in, floors tongue-and-groove.

The buyer lives in this at first, as in a tent. Then he adds partitions, plumbing, heating fixtures and in the end he has a competent five-room house.

This sort of building gives the owner immediate shelter in a primitive form at a price he can afford to pay, but it does not leave him with a jerry-built mess in the end. His own interest and enterprise determine how soon and how well he finishes his house.

Lipstick as Morale-Builder

THE PRESERVATION of moral, social and military values in war time works out in curious ways. It is found that lipstick, for instance, is almost as important as food or dress. When a manufacturer of cosmetics, in a generous mood, asked the British relief society whether the English girls wanted money or lipstick, they chose the latter.

The way they explained their choice is interesting. They didn't say the lipstick made them look more attractive. They said it "helped them to maintain their morale." Cosmetics, to be sure, have always been famous as "morale builders," but it takes the new expression to point out the old truth.

There's talk of making the school study of history compulsory—but wouldn't such a departure from non-essentials seem drastic?

It's probably just as easy for congressmen to talk about "billions" as about "millions"—never having had experience with either.

More Talk of 'Secret Weapon'

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Russia will still be fighting when winter comes again. That is the assurance high government officials are giving. What is more, some of them are predicting that the Nazis are in for some very unpleasant surprises before another month of fighting on the Russian front.

So much has been said about Adolf Hitler's various secret weapons, from time to time, that it is a relief to be able to state, on absolute knowledge, that the Russians will be trying out a secret weapon against Hitler by about the middle of July. More than this cannot be said, nor can any inkling of the nature of the "surprise" be given, but men who know their military tactics and their weapons, and know as much about German weapons and technique as anyone outside Germany itself, predict confidently that Hitler's generals will have to revise their entire strategy as a result.

This secret weapon, they think, is apt to prove as revolutionary in this war as the Merrimac and Monitor proved in the Civil war, though of course the new weapon applies much more importantly to land fighting than to sea.

At first blush it might seem a great deal more encouraging if the new weapon were a sure cure for the submarine, for it is the battle of the Atlantic that is so all important.

SOME experts point out, however, that while the submarine menace to shipping is the vital factor right now, so far as the news is concerned, the new weapon, which, by the time it gets into wholesale operation, will not only hold the Germans, but drive them back, may prove to be more timely than if it were what now seems so much more immediately necessary—a submarine cure.

The theory of the experts on this is that for the present, and for perhaps another year, the submarine in the Pacific is more important to us than to Japan. So that if a perfect cure for the submarine were devised, and the Japs were able to imitate it, the result might be to impede our mopping up of Japan rather than to aid it.

For the present Japan is losing far more from our submarines than she is dishing out to us from hers, despite the spectacular shelling of Pacific coast points, which apparently is serving no useful purpose to Nippon save to encourage her own people by absurd reports of the damage caused and terror inspired.

EXPERTS believe that once the new weapon which is so confidently expected to aid Russia becomes known—as soon as it is used half a dozen times—the Germans will know precisely what it is, they will be able to imitate it without much trouble. But this factor is not as important as it sounds. The net result, if BOTH SIDES had the weapon in quantity today, would be enormously harmful to Germany. It would neutralize what at present is a very real superiority on the part of the German armies.

But if it should develop that the cure for the submarine is equally simple, and therefore as easily imitated after it had been used a few times, while it would be very helpful to the United Nations in the Atlantic it would destroy a very real advantage they will enjoy in the Pacific so long as Japan maintains its grip on far-flung conquered islands. For at least a year after the tide has been turned in the Pacific—in fact, until Japan has been driven out of China—the submarine will continue to be a menace to Nippon.

So let's hope the submarine cure will prove a secret we can keep, once obtained!

Listen World!

'Other World'

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE YOUNGSTER—he's a college freshman this year—and I had been driving past the new building on the campus. It was a lovely thing, strong, simple and spacious. No meaningless gadgets or sentimental filigree. Just clean steel, glass and stucco, shining bravely against the wide sweep and splendor of the sky.

It did something to you, just seeing that building. Uplifted you, somehow—filled you with a new strength and serenity. The youngster's eyes shone as he looked upon it with that quiet, deep way he has.

"It's—it's just other world, isn't it?" he said.

"Other world." I've been hearing that phrase often lately, from the college kids mostly. Sometimes from a sensitive, thoughtful young recruit. It puzzled me at first. I thought there was a gag in it. But there isn't. Nor is there any code or preachment.

It's a perfectly plain statement of what most of our youngsters are beginning to want. Not just the sissies—the regular kids, the boy who is learning welding or trying to qualify as a bombardier. Get them alone some quiet night in one of their bull sessions and you'll hear them talking it over, applying it to a lot of things.

Applying it to anything that's fair and square and straight from the shoulder. Houses. Ships. New kinds of clothes. New codes of human relationship.

Twenty years ago their parents would have sighed, simpered and quoted poetry if anyone had used such a phrase as "other world." Fifty years ago their forthright grandfathers would have snorted at such highfalutin' talk. But today these youngsters who know the tragic cost of sentimentality, the desperate need for reality, neither snort nor simper.

They're fed up with the way of life which has led to this present hell. They refuse to accept the fluff and fuss which pleased their elders. They are demanding more honesty in thought, more direction in action, more surety and simplicity in the trails they must follow.

"Other world." Remember the pictures in the old volume of "Pilgrim's Progress" which you read as a kid and how, high above the muck and fog and Slough of Despond, there shimmered a heavenly vision of cool, untroubled peaks and palaces, to rest and encourage the struggling souls? These modern youngsters don't read "Pilgrim's Progress." And yet I suspect they're seeing some such vision. Seeing it perhaps more clearly and ardently than we who are supposed to be older and wiser.

"A new order"—that's how Hitler blasphemously terms it. And proceeds to smear his vision with horror and hate. But there's another new order coming out of this war which won't be built on hate—a new and finer conception of all values, whether they lie in the lines of a white wall or a gentle friendship or a more decent deal between the Haves and the Have Nots.

Never more will they be content to cover social cess pools with roses or hide weakness behind platitudes. It's really coming, that "Other World" being born at a terrible price. But it will be worth all it costs.

TODAY IN HISTORY

James Abbott McNeill Whistler, world famous for his picture, "Whistler's Mother," was born July 10, 1834, at Lowell, Mass. Whistler belonged to a family of soldiers. At 17 he was entered at West Point but left because his studies proved unsatisfactory. Recognition for his art work came very late. He was subjected to various influences such as Courbet, Velasquez, Purvis de Chavannes, Hogarth and Tintoretto, but always uppermost in his work was his own personality.

Jap Activities In Aleutian Area Points to Alaskan Invasion Plan

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

ACTIVITY of Japanese destroyers in the Aleutian islands, as disclosed by announcement of the torpedoing of five of them by American submarines, is evidence that the enemy is trying to strengthen his foothold on the western Aleutians.

The destroyers undoubtedly were escorting troop transport and supply ships bound for the three islands the Japanese have occupied, Kiska, Attu and Agattu.

There can be no doubt that the Japanese have an important motive for establishing themselves in the Aleutians. Army opinion in Washington leans to the theory that it is connected with an invasion of Siberia rather than of the North American mainland.

It is recognized that the Japanese, by leveling off airfields on the islands and using the excellent harbor facilities of Kisku, could try to edge island by island toward Alaska.

Military authorities are more inclined to think, however, that the Japanese are trying to set up a shield against an American expedition westward in event Japan invades Siberia.

A secondary purpose would be to get athwart the Bering Strait shipping route which can be used in the summer months to carry supplies to Russian Arctic ports.

IT IS a difficult task to dislodge the Japanese from these western-most islands, shrouded most of the time in impenetrable fog. The weather makes it impossible for our bombers to operate effectively on most days. Submarines, on the other hand, can be used efficiently to attack supply lines, since the fog is a help rather than a hindrance.

But the Japanese are persistent and will accept losses to achieve their goal. Once well-established, they can use naval and air power to guard the approach to Kamchatka and Siberia. The enemy has minutely charted these waters during years of "fishing" and can operate freely.

Informed quarters believe it probable that the Japanese will attack Siberia toward the end of this month when the spring floods recede and there is less danger of their tanks being bogged down. They are expected to attack Blagoveschenk and Vladivostok, where the Russian submarine fleet probably is based, and also the northern half of Sakhalin island.

It is taken for granted that should the Japanese attack Siberia, the United States will come to Russia's aid and send heavy forces of bombers to operate from Petropavlosk on Kamchatka and from Vladivostok, if the Japanese do not get there first.

However, it might take months to establish a satisfactory base of operations on Kamchatka. What the Russians have there they have kept secret, but it probably will be necessary to build fields and runways. That will necessitate a water-borne expedition to carry material, supplies, ground crews and other operating personnel.

With their foothold on the Aleutians, the Japanese will be equipped to interfere seriously with such an expedition, which is probably what they have in mind.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Among the heroes of this war, give a thought to the scientists in the Department of Agriculture.

In peacetime, they lead a comparatively simple life. They try to make something out of what we have too much of; and improve production of what we don't have enough of.

Multiply those problems by 1,000 and you'll have what they are up against today.

Under censorship, I can't mention names or processes. Either would give the saboteurs an inkling of where to start. But some of the story can be told now.

SOME of these days very soon, for example, we may have a cotton-filled "sandbag"; cotton plastics for blackout shades; turpentine smoke screens; rosin gas masks for animals.

Staple cotton (instead of linters) soon may be used for smokeless powder in big guns, for anti-aircraft shells and even rifles.

Forestry products soon may be used in place of aluminum for planes; wood cellulose in explosives; charcoal in gas masks; fire resistant woods in hundreds of war materials and as substitutes for raw cork.

Any time now there may be a brand-new canning material, something previously undreamed of.

New insecticides (to replace those imported) may be on the way.

New turfs (grasses) are being developed to withstand multiple airplane landings and to keep down dust which often is a give-away to enemy scouting planes.

AGRICULTURE is one of the key agencies in the allocation of forts, training centers, flying fields, artillery and bombing zones. It has a big hand in locating new war industries, and has been one of the chief forces for decentralization of military production.

Leather is becoming more resistant to wear and water. There are new substitutes for hides, leather and tanning materials.

The technical story of developments in dehydration of meats, fruits, vegetables and dairy products hasn't even been told in part. Dehydrated beef now can be reduced to a third of its original boneless weight, and "re-hydrated" into toothsome hamburgers. Dried eggs and powdered milk are rapidly becoming our greatest food exports.

After the war, the fact that moths starved to death trying to eat woolen uniforms may be bigger news to the average housewife than the terms of the peace treaty.

In the roots of sweet potatoes, there is the same kind of starch that formerly came from our vanished supply of tapioca; cotton fabrics now can be made resistant to mildew.

All these are just a beginning. Other items might be mentioned; scores can't.

But the scientists at Agriculture are wearing the haggard look and the "tan" that comes from midnight oil. They can't find a substitute for either of those.

Nazi Assault On Russian Front Hits At Soviet Supply Sources

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

HITLER is taking advantage of the absence of a second front in Europe to press his assault against the Russian front, says the Communist organ Pravda in Moscow, but the paper squares its shoulders and adds stoutly that "every month we are receiving more materiel and arms from England and the United States."

There we have on thumb-nail the elements of the Allied problem in this white-hot crisis upon which hangs our fate.

A second front would represent military might in action. Undelivered war materiel represents military might in the potential—in convoys on submarine infested seas, or struggling over bomb-torn roads to try to reach the battle-front.

Can we hold the enemy until we can turn our potential striking power into actual force? That's the crux of our problem, and it isn't new. We've known all along that we had to tread the valley of dangers this summer.

If the pressure on the Russians becomes greater than they can withstand, the Allies may be impelled to take a chance and attempt to establish a second front. Hitler must be stopped.

Pending the translation of resources into this sort of offensive action, the movement of supplies to hard-pressed Russia is vital. If the Reds had all the equipment they need they would be wiping their boots on Hitler's flying coattails right now. But they haven't got it, and the Nazi chief is capitalizing on this weakness.

Herr Hitler is employing a double-barreled strategy, trying to sever the Soviet's sources of supplies, and get fresh supplies for himself. That's a shrewd scheme, for it's calculated to hamstring the Bolshevists even if the invaders don't succeed in breaking through to the Caucasus and Middle East and winning the war this year.

This would relieve the pressure on Hitler's eastern front and enable him to get set for the opening of that second Allied front which must come sooner or later.

Timely Editorial

No Warning Hereafter.

Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon—but the next time there's any rationing in this country you are not going to be warned about it weeks in advance so you (of course not you, but your neighbors) can stock up on the scarce article or articles and thus cause a real shortage, even if it did not exist before.

This is a lesson learned—we must hope—from the bitter past, with all its sugar. The statement of present or future purposes is put right down in black and white in connection with a report of the price administrator as to coming needs of his office. It will be necessary, it is said, to ration fifteen more commodities, most of them before the end of the year.

If this starts guessing, all right. But the committee says it is making nothing public in order to avoid "immediate runs on existing stocks and bringing about rationing earlier than ordinarily would be necessary." Sounds like good sense, and it is. It would have been good sense to adopt the principle, earlier. — Kansas City Times.

A Farmer's Diary

Fallen Elm

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I DROVE past a farmhouse where the wind storm of yesterday had blown down a giant, spreading elm that shaded the oldtime dwelling. The farmer, his wife and four young children were in the yard, with sober, grieving faces. The littlest child was crying because the branch was broken on which his swing had hung.

"We heard it go," the farmer said. "It shook the house—blessed good thing it fell the other way, or it might have hurt somebody."

We walked about the prostrate trunk. A cavity in the bowl revealed a gray squirrel's nest where empty shell barks dropped out upon the grass. Above, near the upper end of a dead limb, a flicker made her home. Black ants moved rapidly from a crevice near the upturned roots. Parts of limbs, and tiny severed leaves lay about the lawn for many feet.

"How long have you lived here?" I asked.

"All my life," he said. "My grandfather carried that tree here, on horseback, from 40 miles off, when he built his cabin here—the first settler. Twenty years after that he built this other house, on the same foundation. My father helped to build it—he said the tree was 30 feet high, then. Grandfather cared for it, and fertilized it every year. We all were always taught to admire that tree, and be proud of it. It seemed to make me taller when I stood under it and looked up to the top. Sometimes when I was worried about things on the farm, it was a comfort and an uplift to me. It's always been there. I never knew before how big a hole 'twould make to have it gone . . ." he looked away. My heart ached too.

"When I heard it crash," he added, "it sounded like a knell. It shook the ground around—and shook our spirits too. The sound its twisting, splitting branches made was like a death struggle. I guess you'll think I'm soft, but that tree seemed almost human—it's as though a quiet, faithful friend had gone . . ."

Nimitz Receives Distinguished Service Medal

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)— The navy had disclosed today that the distinguished service medal has been conferred upon Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific fleet.

Admiral Nimitz was decorated by Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, at a short but impressive ceremony aboard a United States warship.

The honor was conferred for exceptionally meritorous service since the outbreak of the war with Japan, particularly in connection with the battles of the Coral sea and Midway island. American naval forces dealt heavy blows to Nipponese sea power in both these encounters.

In a one-minute speech of acceptance, Admiral Nimitz said the achievements behind the award were due to "the devoted service of the men under my command—the task force commanders, the junior officers and the rank and file—a loyal and devoted crew."

FORMER MANSFIELDER'S MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED

Miss Kathryn Spriggins Becomes Bride of Hubert Jackson In High Point, N. C., Church On July 5.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been received of the marriage of Miss Kathryn Spriggins, former Mansfield resident, and Hubert Jackson of High Point, N. C. The ceremony took place on July 5 at the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle in High Point. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Spriggins of Youngstown. Mrs. Bessie Wilborn of High Point is the mother of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Jackson was a nurse in Mansfield and Cleveland for several years and was well known in musical circles. She was the owner and operator of the Mansfield Sanatorium, Park avenue east road, before entering the Missionary Training Institute at Nyack, N. Y. Mr. Jackson was graduated from High Point high school and is a theological student at Nyack.

The church was decorated with sunburst gladioli and baby's breath. Rev. Williams, pastor of the church, performed the double ring ceremony which took place at high noon. Martin L. Edwards, friend of the bridegroom, played the organ, while David Lowe, another friend of Mr. Jackson, and soloist for radio station WMFR, sang "Because."

"The Wedding March" from Wagner's "Lohengrin" was played by Mr. Edwards as the processional. The couple was unattended. For her wedding the bride wore a peach faille taffeta princess style dress with matching hat and shoulder length veil. Her accessories were white and she had a gardenia corsage. Mrs. Wilborn, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a military blue lace dress with white accessories. She wore a corsage of token roses.

Many relatives and friends were in attendance at a buffet dinner served at the bridegroom's home. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will reside at 311 Boulevard street in High Point until Sept. 1, when they will return to New York.

Mrs. H. L. Gilbert Is Hostess to Church Society

The Mary Markley Society of St. Paul's Lutheran church met last night at the home of Mrs. Herman L. Gilbert, 94 West Third street. Miss Katherine Miller presided for the business session. The topic, "Good Samaritan: 1942," was given by Miss Bertene Sawyer. Mrs. Carl Merkle was welcomed as a new member. Guest was Mrs. Hugh Sturgeon of Louisville, Ky., a former member.

The evening was spent sewing for the Oesterlen Orphans Home in Springfield. Refreshments were served at a long table attractively decorated in patriotic colors. The same scheme was carried out in flowers and in the menu. Date for the next meeting is August 15. Mrs. J. Woodraw Seitz, 462 Woodward avenue, will be the hostess. The topic will be given by Miss Olga Luich.

For the program vocal solos were given by Mrs. William Jackson, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Knightstep. Luncheon was served carrying out the club's colors of red and gold. The next meeting will be held July 23 with Mrs. W. F. McCartney, 346 West Fourth street.

Fresh Vegetables Are Attractive, Also Healthful

With Victory Gardens producing a variety of fresh vegetables, now is the time to begin thinking about serving attractive and healthful vegetable platters. At least two vegetables besides potatoes each day are necessary for good health, say nutrition experts. One should be a leafy salad or cooked green vegetable.

It is easy to conform to these requirements and still serve vegetable meals which are tempting and attractive. For example, place a whole cooked cauliflower in the center of a large platter. Then arrange rows of carrots, beets and green beans around it, or other vegetable combinations, if you prefer. It's a good combination from all points of view—health, color and taste.

In preparing Victory Garden vegetables for the table, remember that they are very easily ruined by improper cooking. Vitamins and minerals are lost if too much water is used. If overcooked, they lose their color, too. For most vegetables, just enough water to cover the bottom of the pan is sufficient. During the cooking process, avoid stirring air into the food, for this also increases the vitamin loss.

Choose your utensils carefully. Since health is one of your prime objectives in such a dinner, use utensils which offer the greatest safeguard in sanitation and safety. Of the various types of utensils, your porcelain enameled ware offers the greatest sanitary protection. The enamel finish is smooth and non-porous. It cannot "steal" flavors or food values. Also, the finish is so easily cleaned after each use that it can be restored to sanitary freshness with a minimum of time and effort.

You may steam vegetables if you like. Steaming is particularly good for green vegetables because the higher temperature cuts cooking time and helps preserve the color as well as vitamins and minerals. Remember that the liquids left after cooking vegetables are rich in vitamins. Don't pour them down the drain. Save them for mixing with other foods—tomato juice, soups, etc. Here again, of course, the utensil is important. Your porcelain enameled kettles and saucepans will help preserve their purity.

When cooking strong flavored vegetables such as cauliflower, cabbage and onions, use a larger amount of water. These foods have become known as "smelly" but their odor is unpleasant only when improperly cooked. Frequently they are cooked too long. Use a large porcelain enameled kettle, covered or uncovered. For beets, carrots, green beans, etc., use your enameled saucepans, and a larger amount of water. Cover only if you want them to cook faster.

Scrub carrots with a brush but do not peel them. When tender, rinse quickly in cold water and squeeze off the skins as you do beets. This not only saves the time and trouble of scraping carrots, but helps save all of the food elements. Sometimes, a pinch of sugar helps the flavor in cooking carrots or green beans.

Shower Honors Miss Bush, Who Will Wed Soon

The home of the Misses Nancy and Carolyn Cox, 388 West Third street, was the scene last evening of a shower honoring Miss Maxine Bush, who will become the bride of Pvt. Robert Lantz of the Marine corps on July 19. Hostesses in addition to the Misses Cox were Miss Sally Russell and Miss Anne McCormick.

Bridge was the diversion of the evening. Gifts of crystal were awarded as prizes to Miss Pauline Auxter and Mrs. Harry Lytle, who presented them to Miss Bush. The honoree was recipient of a shower of bathroom gifts from the guests and a special gift from the hostesses.

When luncheon was served to 20 guests, the table was attractively decorated with a miniature bridal setting and garden flowers. Color scheme for the appointments was blue and white. Miss Bush, whose wedding will take place in St. Matthew's Lutheran church, will be honored with additional parties next week.

Plights Troth

Before her marriage at Napoleon on May 24, Mrs. John Schaffer, above, was Miss Julia Ziegler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ziegler, Trimble road. Announcement was made recently of the couple's exchange of vows. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schaffer, 306 Seconr avenue, is an apprentice seaman stationed at the Navy pier in Chicago, Ill. For the present the bride is making her home with her parents.

'We' Club Meets At Moser Home

"We" club members were entertained Thursday at the home of Mrs. Clark Moser, 113 South Foster street. The business session was conducted by Mrs. Lillie Markley, president. Mrs. Moser received the hostess gift. Following the business meeting, card games were played with Mrs. LaVerne Moser and Mrs. Harry DeYarmon winning prizes.

A two-course luncheon was served at a long table centered with a bouquet of yellow and white daisies. Floral favors made of gum drops were at the individual places. Mrs. DeYarmon will be hostess for the next meeting, which will be held on August 13.

Betty Austin to Sing For Benefit of U. S. O.

Miss Betty Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Austin, 286 Rowland avenue, will present a concert of songs Monday evening at the Mansfield-Leland hotel, 8:15, for the benefit of the U.S.O. Mrs. Margaret B. Hall will accompany on the piano.

For the past two years Miss Austin has been studying voice in New York City under private instruction. The first selections on the hour's program will be, "Se Tu M' Ami" by Pergolesi; "A Pastoral" from the opera "Rosalinda" by Veracini and Rossini's "La Danza."

The next group of songs will include, "Plasir d'Amour" by Martini, Delibes' "Les Filles de Cadiz" and "Nobles Seigneurs" from the opera "Les Huguenots" by Meyerbeer. In the middle of the program she will sing the aria, "Ah Fors E Lui" from Verdi's opera, "La Traviata."

Her last group will include three songs written by her voice teacher, Madam Florence Turner-Maley, the first being, "Out Beyond the Window Pane." Further offerings will be "Distance" by Russel Wragg; "Shepherd! Thy Demeanour Vary" by H. Lane Wilson; "Long and Long Ago" by Florence Turner-Maley; Alicia Needham's "Four Ducks on a Pond;" "The Lute in the Grass" by her teacher and Giles Higgins' "My Lovely Celia."

Her final selection will be "Carissima" by Arthur Penn. This is Miss Austin's first concert since she graduated from Mansfield senior high school. Tickets are on sale at Tawse pharmacy, Jones Piano store and U.S.O. headquarters in the Y.M.C.A. building.

What's New In New York City Fashions, Fads

NEW YORK—It's patriotic to walk and save wear and tear on war-time machines and, incidentally, build up your own. Jean Tennyson, singing star of the "Great Moments in Music" radio program, spends her leisure time organizing walking clubs for health and recreation. New York spots within easy reach are well worth your best pair of walking shoes. Oxfords, moccasins and even wedgies are liked for walking, which calls for informal and comfortable clothes. Frocks of cool Celanese jersey, cotton suits, white sharkskin skirts with brightly printed blouses, and washable rayon prints suggest the informal simplicity of summer daytime clothes.

By the by, there is a tendency to go hatless and stockingless these days. Snoods or flower combs are worn instead of hats and bare legs disguise themselves under tan lotions that are sometimes less revealing of skin blemishes than sheer stockings. Usually brief foot gloves are utilized when stockings are omitted.

Lunching outdoors at the smart hotels, sidewalk cafes and roof gardens, however, is another matter. Here one finds the smart people wearing the best Dache hats and most fragile sandals. Hats, incidentally, are huge cartwheels or nothing at all. Jeanne Cagney, movie starlet, often wears a perky black maline bow instead of a hat. Martha Scott likes to wear bows, too, and Jinx Falkenberg tucks a fragile veil in her locks. Mrs. Alexander Hamilton may be seen in a flowered snood; while a tiny smooth-fitting calot, supporting a big white flowery pompom, accents the sartorial elegance of Mrs. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton.

Sheer printed dresses, plain crepe frocks, or well-tailored suits, depending upon the weather, are the fashions preferred for luncheon.

Points of interest attracting New York pedestrians and visitors to this city include the Victory Gardens in Rockefeller Center Plaza, where healthy specimens of vegetables are growing in the center of the promenade. Tall fronds of cabbage leaves, broccoli, corn, Swiss chard, etc., flanked by stems of onions, carrots and radishes, offer a unique picture along this busy thoroughfare.

Fort Tryon park with its hilly paths and beautiful monastic cloisters; the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Central park by the duck ponds and lakes are among the many enjoyable centers.

Shower Held for Miriam Durig, To Wed July 24

A kitchen shower was held last evening at the home of Miss Patricia Stuhldreher, 222 Lexington avenue, in honor of Miss Miriam Durig. Mrs. Larry Glover, Barberton, was associate hostess, for the 14 guests present.

Miss Durig will become the bride of Robert Gundlach July 24 at St. Peter's Catholic church. It will be an open church service at 9:30 a. m. She is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth E. Durig, 91 West Dickson avenue. Mr. Gundlach is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Gundlach, Sandusky.

The honoree was led to her gifts by matching the flowers on each gift with the corresponding ones in a large bridal bouquet. Appointments for the luncheon were in red and white and the centerpiece was of red rose buds and baby breath. Favors of miniature candelabra were used at each place.

The hostess presented Miss Durig with an electrical gift. Games and cards were played with prizes going to Mrs. Durig, Miss Naomi Howell and Miss Eunice Stough, who in turn presented them to the honoree.

Marries July 4

Miss Virginia Mae Hockensmith became the bride of William David Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard K. Meyer, Pavonia, July 4, at the Pavonia Methodist church. Her father, A. V. Hockensmith, Shiloh, announces her marriage.

Needle Tricks Help to 'Save For Victory'

Fashions authorities urge you to enlist in the "Save for Victory" campaign—by learning a few needle tricks that will give new life to the old, discarded clothes in your wardrobe.

A dress with worn sleeves may be salvaged by making entirely new sleeves of contrast.

If a dress is ruined by underarm stains, cut off the sleeves, cut away the damaged fabric, and turn it into a smart jumper style.

When the back neck of a frock becomes worn, or when the back bodice top gets faded, a clever life-preserving trick is to make a shoulder yoke of a bright contrasting fabric.

A too-big garment can be made to fit by using a panel of contrasting fabric down the front. A too-short frock may by adjusted by inserting a waistband, hip yoke, hem border or skirt band of a gay contrasting fabric.

If the upper part of a dress is worn or outmoded, use the skirt and make a new bodice or jacket of contrast. If the skirt seams of a dress are split, just reverse this procedure.

Misses Kiraly and Zimmerman Entertain Members of Sigma Kappa Gamma; Results of Tennis Matches Announced.

THE Misses Doris Kiraly and Margaret Zimmerman entertained members of Sigma Kappa Gamma sorority at a wiener roast last evening at Miss Kiraly's home on Linden road. A business meeting was held later in the evening. Plans were made for a picnic for the girls and their mothers. It will be held in South park at 6:30 p. m. on July 23.

Members of the committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic are the Misses Dorothy Blackstone, chairman, Eileen Minard, Marguerite Boyer, Janet Wilson and Miss Zimmerman.

Results of the semi-finals in the tennis tournament were announced and the Misses Blackstone and Helen Desterhaft will play in the final match. Names were drawn to start another tournament. "Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Katharine's long years of rigid training served her well as she strove to subdue her flaming anger against me for what she patently thought was an effort to keep her from going in search of her husband.

She spoke no word of reproach, but twisted out of my grasp and stood erect.

"I hardly think any one of you will try to keep me here by force," she said, "and unless you tie me up I am starting now to search the hospitals."

She turned toward the door, but I flung myself past her, put my back against the door.

"Of course you are going to search the hospitals," I said. "I never meant to keep you from doing that. Nor would Dicky or my father attempt to dissuade you. They can see as well as I that there is no possible argument to which you would listen."

Katharine Relents.

"Then why did you try to keep me here?" she asked me.

"Simply because I did not want you to go on your search alone." I told her. "I knew you would not listen to me if I asked you to wait for a guard, so I sent a frantic summons for Dicky and my father. Please forgive me, dear."

In swift capitulation, she put her arms around me in a convulsive embrace.

"Forgive me, instead," she said, "but I know you understand. And now," as she turned to my father and Dicky, "I must tell you that while I do not in the least object to a guard, I can wait for one no longer than a few minutes.

"You will not have to wait at all," my father said. "Richard, please ask Adams to come here."

"I wondered how you managed it," she said. Then Dicky returned, followed by Adams.

"Is there any reason why you cannot leave the hotel immediately and accompany this lady for a tour of the hospitals, which may last all night?" my father asked.

"None at all," Adams replied quietly. "I am supposed to be on duty in the next suite, and nobody is to telephone me. But — you know, they will expect to have my breakfast sent up."

"You probably will be back for breakfast," my father said. "But if you are not I will order it, and receive it for you in the living room, saying that you have a headache and are lying down."

"That ought to hold them," Adams commented. "Now I'll get my hat and coat and come back ready to go."

While he went to the next suite I opened Katharine's suitcase and held it out to her.

"You will want your purse probably," I told her, and she delved into the case and brought it up.

Spencer Gives Orders.

"Mrs. Bickett will tell you where she wishes to go," my father told Adams, "but don't let her out of your sight for a minute. And if you think you are going to need help, telephone me here, using the code."

"I'll attend to everything," Adams said quietly.

Then, my heart filled with relief, I gave a parting admonition to Katharine.

"Come back up here the minute you're finished," I said, and taking the apartment key from the desk, I put it into her hand.

"I'll go to bed, of course," I said, "but you know how easily I waken and go to sleep again, so do not hesitate to wake me up when you come back into the apartment."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TOO BIG A SACRIFICE

No sacrifice is too big to make, to help your country win this war. But that is so only because what we stand to win or lose is so tremendous. In every case, the sacrifice or hazard of sacrifice should be comparable to the proposition which is at stake. In bridge this may be applied logically by pointing out that a very considerable sacrifice is worth while to prevent a slam, but a much smaller one to prevent a mere game. Being beaten deliberately for an amount of points which is more than the game is worth—that is too big a sacrifice.

Up to and including the call of 3-No Trumps, there was nothing particularly wrong about that bidding, except perhaps that South was a little venturesome in risking the bid with only one stopper in hearts. As it turned out, if South took the second heart trick, he then could have run five clubs, four diamonds and a spade, for a total of 11 tricks or his contract plus two extras.

3 NT	4 ♥	Dbl

West went away overboard, however, when he sacrificed at 4-Hearts. With only seven tricks in sight in his own hand, he was overbidding three, hoping to take a trick or two in his partner's hand, which was very unwise in bidding. He actually took no tricks in his partner's hand, but only seven in his own. He was therefore down three, giving the opponents a score of 800, instead of a plain game plus a couple of extra tricks, which would have been worth about 660. If he had been not vulnerable, the sacrifice would have paid, as entailing a loss of only 500 points, less than the value of a game.

GARDEN CLUB MEETS

ASHLAND — Guest Day was held by members of the Hill Crest Garden club at the home of Mrs. D. E. Sower. The program was presented by Mrs. C. E. Rohn and Mrs. Clayton Harmon. Prizes for a garden spelling bee were won by Mrs. John Wolf and Mrs. Ira Martin.

HOROSCOPE

FOR SATURDAY, JULY 11

Although this day may be notable for much activity and swift developments it will take more than ordinary good sense, restraints and sound programs in order to sidestep adverse and conflicting situations. There are all sorts of intrigues, duplicities, pitfalls and subtle dangers to be alert to and fortified against. It may be necessary to mistrust friend as well as foe.

Those whose birthday it is may have to marshal all their sound sense, reason, good judgment and fortitude to offset certain menacing conditions arising from subtle, intriguing, treacherous and sinister forces, in which not only enemies but alleged friends are suspect. Be cautious in change, travel, with agents and in all writings and agreements.

A child born on this day while versatile, talented and original, may be easily victimized and imposed upon by subtle and sinister machinations.

BUILD TUBELESS TIRES FOR USE ON HEAVY TRUCKS; SAVES RUBBER

(By Associated Press)

AKRON — Development of a tubeless pneumatic tire for heavy vehicle use, was announced here today by John L. Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich company.

Utilizing a specially designed locking member which retains the air in the casing, the new tire effects an important saving in rubber by dispensing with the ordinarily required inner tubes and flaps.

While the amount of rubber saved by the new development varies depending upon the size of the tire, Collyer estimated that the minimum was approximately seven per cent of the rubber content of the conventional casing, tube and flap combined.

Collyer said that already substantial test results obtained by the company demonstrate the usefulness of the tire and its ability to perform under all sorts of difficult road conditions. Further tests under other auspices, he said, now are being conducted.

In the event the tire is cut or otherwise becomes deflated, it was explained, time can be saved in repairs as there is no inner tube to be patched or replaced.

The announcement emphasized that the tubeless tire, described as the goal of tire engineers for half a century, is strictly a heavy vehicle device at this stage. Its possible ultimate application to conventional passenger cars was not even hinted.

COMBINE TURNED INTO PICKER

COWETA, Okla.—(U.P.)—Farmer T. R. Stone and his son, Ralph, have perfected a spinach picker that is doing the job well at a marked decrease in labor costs.

The Stones took a second-hand combine, overhauled the machine, added a 10-foot conveyor belt plus a few other parts and developed a machine that cuts spinach expertly. As far as they know it's the only machine of its kind in the country.

Inability to hire common laborers for the spinach picking caused Stone and his son to try building a machine that would do the work. They decided last fall that a harvester they were using for other vegetable crops might be used also for spinach.

Find 20 Bodies After Mine Explosion

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

The Legends of Broadway.

(No. 21—Mother, Inc.)

There is no occupational group in the world—except, perhaps, the florists—more ardently in favor of mothers than are theatrical comedians.

Kilgallen

When there is a loud laughter somewhere in the audience, a smart comic can always get the other customers to join in by calling out: "Please, Mom, wait for the punch line!" A funnyman can always get a chuckle with: "Please don't tell my mother I'm working here. She thinks I'm in St. Louis, peddling dope!" Or the boys will tell how they paid back the Friendly Loan company and thus got Mom released from the dungeon.

Yet, though the boys are always talking about them, the little old ladies rarely become known to the patrons who hear so many references to them onstage.

The impressive exception to this rule is the ample, friendly lady named Sarah Berle, who brought Milton Berle into the world, and thus assured herself of eventually becoming the most famous of all mothers, with the possible exception of Whistler's.

Sarah Berle is as much a Broadway legend as her son, and with good reason. The saga of Milton's success is her story as well as his. She has been photographed, interviewed, and even presented on stages in person. You can't be around Milton for more than two minutes without hearing about Ma.

Ma Berle was born on New York's lower West Side, just north of Greenwich Village. Her family had never even been close to show business, and young Sarah's ambition to become an actress got little encouragement from her parents, less from the managers.

She met and married Israel Berle, a tailor, and children came—five of them. The youngest was Milton; and from the moment he was able to walk and talk, Sarah knew that the theater was still a possibility for her. She couldn't be an actress; no. But she could be the mother of an actor.

Milton was five years old when Mrs. Berle launched him on his career by entering him in an amateur contest at the Mount Morris theater in Harlem. With a minute piece of sealskin coat stuck on his upper lip, he imitated Charlie Chaplin—and won first prize, $2.

Mrs. Berle at that time was supporting her whole family—her husband was seriously ill—by working as a store detective in Wanamaker's. During her lunch hour she would rush uptown to the old Putnam building, where the Paramount building now stands, and take Milton on the rounds of the agents' office there.

Pretty soon all the agents and managers along Broadway knew this tall, handsome woman and her curly-haired youngster who always wore a Buster Brown collar, Norfolk jacket, and knee pants—because that was the only suit he had. Agents have an aversion to stage mothers, as who hasn't, but there was something about Mrs. Berle's confident zeal that impressed them. And when Milton was six he got his first professional job—he played Pearl White's baby brother in the endless "Perils of Pauline" serials.

The salary was $35 a week—pretty good in those days—and Milton emoted at the old Vitagraph studios along with such contemporary stars as Mary Pickford, Lionel Barrymore, Milton Sills and John Bunny.

Young Milton's success in films led to vaudeville, and when he was 11, Ma Berle teamed him with a little girl, Elizabeth Kennedy. As Berle and Kennedy, they toured the circuits playing split weeks, one-nighters, doing eight and nine shows a day.

Mrs. Berle was out front at every performance, laughing at Milton's jokes and songs, applauding like mad. She battled managers for better billings, rehearsed the pit bands on the act's music, and between shows tutored the kids with aid of a set of lessons mailed from New York by a school-teacher friend.

When Milton was a tall, gangling 15, he went out as a single act—a recognized performer.

In 1923 he played the Palace for the first time, and Broadway saw his name in lights.

You know the rest of Milton's story, but maybe you don't know the rest of Mom's. She relaxes now. She likes night clubs—the Stork and Leon and Eddie's are her favorites—and she plays a ferocious game of poker or gin rummy.

It was in 1937 that she made her first appearance on a stage, quite unexpectedly. Milton was doing particularly well, and along about the fifth encore he asked the customers if they'd like to meet the Mom he was always taking about. Mrs. Berle walked on, got a terrific hand, and then returned to her seat in the orchestra. She's been on the stage quite often since, and is always rated, as Variety would say, a solid click.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Lester Cowan, the producer, is excited about "The Commandos," the C. S. Forester story he bought for pictures even before it appeared in magazine form.

John Farrow, directing, is finding "The Commandos" his meat.

Paul Muni, who is starring, is excited, too, in a way—a cautious way.

It is not that Muni is still worried that, being dark, he will not be accepted as a Norwegian hero. He and Farrow went down to Los Angeles harbor and talked to heroes of Norway's merchant marine—men who face Quisling, which is death, if captured—and saw that some of these heroes were as dark of skin and hair as Paul Muni.

Coons

Paul Muni, who was content to be Muni Weisenfreund in the old days and to stay in the theater, to wear beards one week and knee-pants the next, first came to Hollywood when talking pictures were in their infancy and nobody knew whether the new-born was prodigy or idiot. He made "The Valiant" to critical praise, and then—because Lon Chaney was a make-up king and very, very popular—somebody at the old Fox studio decided to go Lon six better. Muni came forth in "Seven Faces." Muni was in hearty agreement with the studio executive who said the femmes would never take him as a substitute for handsome Charlie Farrell, and he retreated to New York. He had made $750 a week, more money than he'd dreamed of, and he and Bella Finkle, his wife, knew so little about spending it that they invested it in stocks—$22,000 worth.

Came 1929, and they were back on Broadway, broke. A new "cycle" had hit Hollywood. James Cagney in "Public Enemy." Edward G. Robinson in "Little Caesar." Gangsters. Howard Hughes wanted Paul Muni to do "Scarface." Muni, no handsomer, asked $25,000. An agent of Hughes offered $15,000. Then his wife settled for $22,500.

And so "Scarface" became a hit that still pays, and Paul Muni became a star—a star who, understandably, cannot become "excited" over a new role.

WALL STREETERS SEE INFLATION CHECK SLIPPING

Cite Recommendation For Wage Boost and Increase In Fruit Prices.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Are inflation controls holding?

Some Wall Streeters doubt it. In the past two days, buyers have given the stock market its busiest trading of the year, boosting leading shares $2 to $4 or more. Meanwhile, wheat prices were bid up around 5 cents a bushel at Chicago.

At the same time, others pointed out that President Roosevelt's seven-point program for keeping prices down was announced only last April 27, that Price Administrator Henderson's retail price ceiling was clamped down only May 18. While some adjustments, and some apparent wavering may appear, they said, control is so vital that firmer measures are eventually inevitable, if needed.

Only last Wednesday, Jesse Jones, secretary of commerce and federal loan administrator, warned that price inflation would "lead to ultimate bankruptcy—national and individual."

Three recent developments were mentioned in Wall Street as leading to speculation of war labor board panel that a plea for a $1-a-day wage increase by workers in four so-called "Little Steel" companies be granted. The panel's recommendation still has to be decided by the board.

Approval by the office of price administration of increased prices of canned and frozen fruits and vegetables.

Passage by the senate of a bill to permit full parity loans to farmers on six major crops. This would bring the loan value of wheat, for instance, up to $1.34 a bushel. July wheat closed in the Chicago pit yesterday at $1.21⅛. To become law, the measure still must pass the house, and be signed by the president.

Cost of living figures for Canada show stability since price ceilings were inaugurated late last year. The latest figures available from the bureau of labor statistics for the United States show the cost of living in early June actually was a shade below the date when the retail price ceiling was fixed.

The big inflation problem, as seen by Commerce Secretary Jones, Price Administrator Henderson, and others in Washington, is mounting purchasing power in time of growing limitation of the amount of goods available to be bought.

HADN'T HEARD ABOUT THE WAR

Prospector Learns a Lot of Things When He Returned To Town.

PUEBLO, Colo.—(INS)—J. H. McHugh, 56-year-old prospector, was catching up on his history today.

McHugh was arrested while loitering in the Santa Fe railroad yards. Police questioned him about his military status.

"What military status?" asked McHugh.

"In the war, of course."

"What war?"

The prospector explained he had been in a remote spot in the Colorado Rockies for many months—far from a newspaper or anyone who talked about the war.

McHugh was released after his age was established.

FLASH FLOODS HIT 4 STATES

Trail of Property Damage and Six Deaths Left as Waters Recede.

(By United Press)

Flood waters receded today along small streams in Illinois, Kentucky, Virginia and Missouri where a series of flash floods resulted in heavy property damage and caused at least six deaths.

The stricken areas embraced communities in southwestern Virginia and eastern Kentucky and in Illinois and Missouri near the St. Louis metropolitan area.

The Red Cross, aiding the victims estimated that 5,000 persons were affected by the flash floods along the Kentucky and Big Sandy rivers in Virginia and Kentucky.

In Kentucky, James Rutledge, 23, Sassafras, and Ercel Hall, 35, Whitaker, were drowned. An unidentified Negro was drowned near Vicco, Ky., attempting to aid persons marooned in a flooded store.

Damage to fields and farm homes were reported most severe in Letcher, Perry, Pike and Floyd counties in Kentucky.

At St. Louis, Robert Schmid, 15, and Charles Burnelle, 12, were drowned in Coldwater creek. They were swept into the swollen stream while riding bicycles on a flooded road.

Flood waters forced power plants in Illinois and Missouri communities to stop their generators temporarily.

Refuse to Fight For U. S., Just Want Its Money

DETROIT —(INS)— Three brothers of Italian birth who came to this country to make money but who, FBI men say, refuse to fight under the Stars and Stripes, were in custody today on draft evasion charges while a fourth brother was sought for jumping bond after pleading not guilty to a similar charge.

The three in custody were Antonio Ianni, 26; Guido, 28, and Altelio, 22. The fourth brother, Gino, 31, was the object of an FBI search.

FBI agents quoted Antonio as saying "I came here in 1934 to make a lot of easy dough. But I like Mussolini and if I were back in Italy I'd fight against the United States."

Guido was quoted as saying that. "I want to go back to Italy as soon as possible. The only reason I came was to get money for a farm there and I've already sent $5,000 to my uncle Carlos who is buying it for me."

"It is unlucky I ever came here," Altelio was quoted as saying.

WAR SUPPORT RECORDS LIKELY TO BE OHIO ELECTION ISSUE

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Support of the administration's war efforts since Pearl Harbor and its previous preparedness efforts and policies probably will be the principal issues in Ohio's 1942 congressional primary and election campaigns.

Only in isolated instances—such as the challenge by H. T. Phillips of Athens of Rep Thomas Jenkins' right to renomination in the 10th district—are other issues likely.

Phillips, a Republican state senator is opposing Jenkins chiefly on the contention that he has New Deal leanings and has done little for the country or his party as a congressman.

Candidates of the "out party" in the district congressional contests probably will vie in proclaiming how and why they are better qualified to help win the war.

It may be expected also that incumbent congressmen will continuously keep their eyes peeled and ears cocked for any sign of approval of their war and defense activities by the national administration. Washington has indicated that the national administration will not mix in primary disputes.

Two incumbent Democratic congressmen with primary opposition, Martin L. Sweeney in the 20th (Cleveland) district and Robert Crosser in the 21st (Cleveland) district, already have been served notice by the Democratic organization in Cuyahoga county, that their war records are not acceptable.

The organization has indorsed Michael A Feighan, a former minority leader in the Ohio house of representatives, in preference to Sweeney, while John Gilespie was given organization approval over Crosser.

Efforts to aid small business also may enter into both the primary and election contests.

STAGE OUTING

Veteran Westinghouse Workers Hold Picnic Saturday.

Members of the Mansfield chapter of the Westinghouse Veterans association—employes with more than 20 years of service with the company, will hold their annual picnic Saturday afternoon at the R. R. Hays farm near Ontario.

A program committee headed by E. J. Hegarty has arranged a schedule of games and sports, with prize awards in contests, and refreshments will be served.

The local chapter was organized three years ago as a branch of the headquarters organization in Pittsburgh. Present membership is 112, all with more than 20 years of service. The employe with the longest company record is Joseph Berger, who has been working for Westinghouse for 45 years. There are 15 men with more than 30 years service.

Officers are Guy Shauk, president, W H. Miller, vice president; Roy Wilkins, secretary; and C. J. Fay, treasurer.

ACCIDENT DEATHS INCREASE

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Accidental deaths in Columbus are on the increase with the present figure standing at 79 compared with 73 for the first six months of 1941. Of this total, 23 met death in traffic, the chamber of commerce safety council reported.

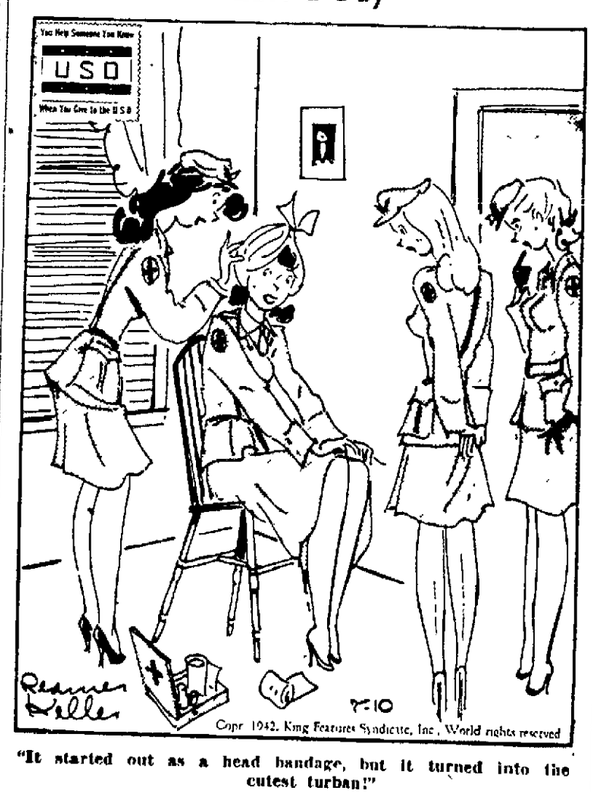
TAX PAYMENTS HIT $124,356

Richland county taxpayers poured $124,356 into the county treasurer's office in the first 10 days of the real estate tax collections for the last half of 1941.

The largest daily collection so far has been $17,000 with yesterday's collection of $6,902 being about the daily average.

Taxpayers have until Aug 20 to make their payments without penalty. Approximately $700,000 is anticipated in returns.

Laff-a-Day



"It started out as a head bandage, but it turned into the cutest turban!"

Regular visits of the Mansfield Public library book truck to the six library stations and two branch libraries in Richland county have upped the county circulation considerably this summer. Although tabulations are still incomplete a definite increase in circulation is shown by the rising demand for books since the truck began its vacation schedule. Olivesburg residents were recently made more conscious of the library service by a new library section in a local store.

It looked like professional men's night at Westbrook Country club last night. Two large dinner parties were held in the main dining room of the club. If you are engaged in work which contributes to the war effort, or in public welfare, you'll be eligible to buy a new bicycle under the rationing program which was scheduled to go into effect yesterday. Richland county's rationing boards will start to issue authorizations for bike purchases as soon as forms are received from state headquarters. To receive such authorizations, persons must live at least three miles from work, and be able to save 30 minutes by use of bicycles.

TALKS TO CLUB

Quakers Can Fight In This War, Dr. Onderdonk Says.

The present world struggle was described as "a clear-cut issue between good and evil" by Dr. Francis S. Onderdonk, educator and world traveler, in a talk before the Mansfield Kiwanis club in the Mansfield-Leland hotel Thursday noon.

Because it is a struggle between good and evil, Quakers can fight in this war, Dr. Onderdonk said. He is a Quaker himself. He described the leaders of the Axis nations as "super-gangsters," and told of the bloody purges which preceded their first rise to power.

Although born in New York, Dr. Onderdonk grew up in Australia and attended schools in that nation. He came back to this country in 1925, and since then has been an instructor at University of Michigan, in Ann Arbor. He has written several books and many articles, and in eight years has travelled more than 220,000 miles in the course of his lecture tours.

RESCUE MEN BRAVE FIRE AND DEBRIS

50 Escape; Victims Trapped Behind Wall of Flame Near Morgantown.

(By International News Service)

MORGANTOWN, W. Va.—Smoke-blackened rescue squads, battling for hours through debris and flames, today found the bodies of 20 miners killed when an explosion ripped through the No. 2 mine of the Pursglove Mining company at nearby Scott's Run.

Joseph Stuart, mine manager, announced that all but 20 of the 70 men in the mine at the time of the blast late yesterday had escaped. Earlier it was feared the death toll would be greater since many survivors re-entered the shaft to aid in rescue work.

Inspectors from the U. S. Bureau of Mines in Pittsburgh, Pa., Waynesburg, Pa., and Fairmount, W. Va., hurried to the scene and joined state police and mine officials in an investigation.

The twenty victims were trapped behind a wall of flames four miles inside the bore. Some survivors thought the blast might have occurred in Pennsylvania, since the mine tipple is little more than four miles from the West Virginia-Pennsylvania border.

Rescue squads worked all night and located the bodies after the fire that followed the explosion had been extinguished. Because of the wreckage in the pocket, the rescuers estimated it would be several hours before the victims could be removed.

Hundreds of relatives and friends kept an all-night vigil at the mine entrance awaiting word from the rescue squad of seventy-five.

Mine officials said they could not explain the cause of the blast since all precautions had been taken for safety of the miners. The bore was inspected and declared safe less than a fortnight ago, they said.

The mine is only a short distance from Osage, where, last May, 56 miners lost their lives in a similar explosion.

New Source of Ohio Manpower Tapped by Query

COLUMBUS — (AP) — A new supply of manpower for Ohio's war industries has been tapped through a study of occupational questionnaires sent to men registered for selective service, Wade Hammond, Ohio director of the U. S. employment service, reported today.

"A considerable number of the men who have returned questionnaires are trained in critical skills needed by defense industries, although they now are employed in non-essential fields," Hammond asserted.

The service, streamlining its program to meet employment needs of war plants, "to the exclusion of all others" wherever necessary, is diverting workers from non-essential to industrial jobs as rapidly as possible, he said.

Listing of domestic help and other unskilled job hunters, once a major portion of the service's program, will become an incidental function and eventually may be abandoned, Hammond declared. The curtailment will be gradual so that firms and individuals previously depending on the service may obtain help from other sources.

FIGHTS CHILD BRIDE'S SUIT

71-Year-Old Husband Denies Charges Filed By Wife, 17.

ZANESVILLE — (U.P.) — Charles Shipman, 74-year-old farmer who took his child bride to the Muskingum valley 11 months ago for an idyllic life in a log cabin, is not going to give up his wife, Emma Sue Shipman, 17, without a fight.

In an answer to her divorce petition, Shipman denied charges that he failed to provide for her properly, that he drank constantly and threatened and cursed her.

The couple was married in August by a Negro minister after several ministers had refused to unite them. They separated May 1.

Pitchers Have Big Day of It

But Most of Them Take Advantage of Lights.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

WITH long rests behind all of them, pennant drives in front of some of them and artificial light around most of them, major league pitchers enjoyed one of their best days of the season yesterday.

As the teams returned to action after the three-day intermission for all-star games, both leagues produced some sparkling mound performances, including a four-hitter in 11 innings, four five-hitters and a trio of six-hit jobs, two of which still weren't good enough to win.

Five of the winners had the help of the arc lights last night, but the masterpiece of the day was the 11-inning stint of Charlie Wagner, who held the Detroit Tigers to four blows in pitching the Boston Red Sox to a 2-1 decision in broad daylight.

Hal Newhouser, Wagner's opponent, pitched four-hit ball for ten innings but yielded two singles in the 11th and Manager Joe Cronin inserted himself as a pinch hitter, bringing in Boston's winning run with a long fly.

The Red Sox needed the victory to stay within four lengths of the American league leading New York Yankees, who dropped the St. Louis Browns, 5-2. Hank Borowy kept his place at the top of the circuit's pitching ranks. It was the seventh triumph against one defeat for Borowy, who was aided by the long-distance clouting of Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich and Charlie Keller against three Brownie hurlers

Buddy Blair helped Phil Marchildon of the Philadelphia Athletics whip the Cleveland Indians, 5-2, in a night game. Marchildon turned in a five-hitter. Blair lashed a home run and triple

In another night tilt, the Chicago White Sox dumped the Washington Senators, 4-2.

Whitlow Wyatt pitched and batted the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 3-2 decision over Johnny Vander Meer and the Cincinnati Reds While Wyatt was notching his ninth victory against two defeats under the lights, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the New York Giants, 9-0. Johnny Beazley shut out the Giants on six hits.

* * *

The Philadelphia Phils met a similar fate at Pittsburgh, where the Pirates whitewashed them, 9-0, in a night game for army-navy relief which drew 29,488 fans and a gate of $36,308 51 . Rip Sewell handcuffed the Phils on five hits The Boston Braves and Chicago Cubs played the longest game of the day, an afternoon affair that ended when Buddy Gremp smashed a home run in the 13th inning to give the Braves the nod, 4-3

CHARLES MILL CLUB TO MEET TUESDAY

Notices mailed by Secretary Leo Yuncker for a meeting of the Charles Mill Sportsmen's club for Tuesday evening in the Mansfield municipal court room say:

"Come, make known your wants, and bring a new member with you."

Bob Kuzava Hit by Ball

Knocked Unconscious as Senators Lose to Ducks.

DAYTON, O.—(AP)—Credit Dayton Shortstop Bill Hardy's bruised chest with an assist in the Mid-Atlantic league's first triple play of the 1942 season.

The three-outer came in the third inning as the Ducks were defeating first-place Charleston 3 to 2 last night.

* * *

With men on first and third, Senator Catcher Ralph Weigel hit a hard bounder which ricocheted off Hardy's chest and was scooped up by Second Baseman Hayden Greer. He stepped on the sack to force Shortstop Bob Blatnik, who was on first.

* * *

Greer then threw to first, retiring Weigel. First Baseman Fred Gerken relayed to Stan Lipka at third, catching Second Baseman Bob Ankrum off the sack

Hardy got an assist in the box score.

Charleston's ace Pitcher Bob Kuzava was knocked unconscious by a batted ball, but X-rays showed he was not hurt seriously.

Canton trounced Zanesville, 12-3, and Erie walloped Springfield 10-1.

Vander Meer Vanquished

Holds No Terrors For Brooklyn Dodgers.

CINCINNATI — (AP)—Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer may be tough for American league sluggers but he's still easy for the Dodgers.

Brooklyn, in winning 3-2 last night got four hits and two runs off Vandy before the second inning ended.

So the Reds go into the second contest of the four-game series tonight 13 games behind their pace-setting opponents. Bucky Walters will be gunning for his tenth victory against six defeats and his first over the Dodgers who've beaten him three times. Kirby Higbe, who failed to finish any of three starts against the Reds, will be after his ninth triumph.

Bald Whitlow Wyatt's fast one put the Reds down with five hits last night, but three paid off. Gee Walker and Ival Goodman doubled for a run in the second and Wyatt fumbled Rollie Hemsley's bouncer in the eighth then threw into the Reds' dugout. Hemsley advanced on a fly and scored on Lonnie Frey's single

Bert Haas' bad throw on Arky Vaughan's sacrifice after Pewee Reese singled to start the game cost a run, for Pete Reiser singled Reese home Wyatt clubbed a single in the second after two walks and a sacrifice, scoring the Dodgers' other two A single and walk again filled the bases and Vandy went out for Elmer Riddle, who held the Dodgers to two hits from there until their hitless ninth which Clyde Shoun hurled.

Third Ace Shot at Westbrook

BOB MOORHEAD

Former Westbrook Country club golf champion Bob Moorhead Wednesday scored the third hole-in-one recorded this season on No. 8 green at Westbrook, a 132-yard poke. And thereby hangs a story. A club caddy had a Spalding Topflight ball, out of production in recent years. Pro Tom Rakiets bid 10 cents, Moorhead 15. Moorhead got it. And, playing with Bill Jacobs, he banged that 15-cent ball at No. 8 green, where it landed on the carpet, took one hop and went in the can.

Why Boys! Ya Got Ya Shoits Off'

A 12-game football schedule has been arranged for the University of Iowa's Naval Pre-Flight training school this fall. Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman, former coach at Minnesota and now director of physical education at the naval school, heads the football coaching staff which includes, left to right, Bierman, Dallas Ward of Minnesota, Phil Bengston of Minnesota, Thevor Rees of Ohio State and Don Heap of Northwestern, all former stars.

John Niggeling's Knuckler Called Best In Big Leagues

By DILLON GRAHAM
Wide World Sports Editor.

NEW YORK—Ball players say John Niggeling of the Browns has the best knuckle ball in the American league.

The junior loop probably has more knucklers now than ever before And many pitchers who don't use it regularly experiment occasionally.

It's Niggeling's best throw and he wasn't much of a pitcher until he perfected it. Fellows with control and speed or a lot of stuff don't need to monkey with the knuckler but it has been a lifesaver for some.

Niggeling's pitch seems to do tricks as it flutters up to the plate. John is perhaps the only tosser who uses just one knuckle bent inward as the ball is delivered The Browns have another pitcher, George Caster, who makes good use of this delivery.

Ted Lyons, the Chicago White Sox veteran, has developed a pretty good knuckler. Lyons doesn't even grip the ball with the knuckles, but with the finger tips.

To be a successful knuckler, the pitcher must have a catcher who can handle the delivery. The ball must be thrown so that it will not spin. How it breaks depends on the air currents and neither the pitcher or catcher knows how it will go. It is most effective when thrown into the wind because then it is most certain to break.

Like all other pitches, it must be controlled to be effective. If a pitcher can't get the ball in, then it isn't much good The hitter has to be made to swing. Niggeling, unlike most of the others, has such comparatively good control that he will throw the knuckler even when he is behind the batter.

Last year Dutch Leonard of the Senators was rated the best knuckler but he suffered a fractured bone in his ankle in April and has been on the sidelines.

The A's have two knucklers in Luman Harris and Roger Wolff. Heber Newsome, a sensation last year and still a consistent winner, is the knuckler on the Red Sox staff.

The other day a golfer, watching a comparatively small woman practically wrap the club around the back of her neck and then lash down at it for a 270-yard drive, asked why strong men couldn't take a longer backswing and, with their superior power, punch one out 350 yards

Old Jim Barnes, who won the PGA crown nearly a quarter of a century ago and still is a fine competitor, answered:

"Because man, inherently an awkward animal, is not born with the physical grace and delicacy of movement natural to a woman. The history of all sports proves what happens to a man when he begins swinging widely. Woman is the swinger, man the hitter."

One of the reasons why the late Lou Gehrig was such a popular sports figure was that although a professional, he played baseball for the love of it. New emphasis came the other day when Guy Lombardo, the bandleader and motorboat racing enthusiast, got to talking about a conversation with Lou back at the time when Babe Ruth went to the Boston Braves as coach.

"Why," asked Guy of Lou, "doesn't the Babe quit? He certainly doesn't have to work any more." And Lou replied "Why don't you quit music? I wouldn't quit playing baseball if I had 70 billion dollars. I'll play until they cut my shoes off and I have a beard way down to here"

Dean Pounded By Athletics

Surprise Mound Move Backfires For Tribe.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians opened their eastern invasion with a surprise pitcher, and were both surprised and disappointed in the results.

Lefty Al Smith had been named to pitch against the Philadelphia Athletics last night, but Manager Lou Boudreau upset the dope by calling on Chubby Dean to hurl against his old teammates. They greeted him in a most surprising manner for men of the city of brotherly love—they clubbed Dean with nine hits in seven innings, and handed him a 5 to 2 defeat.

This put the Tribe eight games behind the New York Yankees and four behind the Boston Red Sox.

The Redskins opened the game by scoring two runs in the first inning. Roy Weatherly scored on an infield out and Oris Hockett tallied on a wild pitch.

After that Pitcher Phil Marchildon scattered four Indian hits, two of them coming during a brief rally in the eighth With one out, Catcher Jim Hegan singled and Dean followed suit. Dean was replaced by a pinch runner, but both men died on base.

Meanwhile the A's collected 10 safeties, scoring one run in the first inning, two in the fourth and another in the sixth off Dean. When he was replaced, Joe Heving came in to hurl the eighth inning and allowed one hit, Buddy Blair's home run.

Village Farm Tops Race Card

GOSHEN, N. Y.—(AP)—The senior division of the Village Farm stake for pacers tops today's grand circuit card at the Goshen raceway and, as in yesterday's two-year-old division, elimination heats will be required because of the size of the field.

Thirteen three-year-old pacers were named overnight for the 5,100 stake. Heading the field is Court Jester, undefeated colt owned by Fred Egan and Rupe Parker.

The $7,675 Village Farm stake for two-year-old pacers went to the favorite, Widow's Pride, owned by Sullivan and Mawhinney of Machias, Me, and driven by Vic Fleming. Widow's Pride won the first elimination easily but was all out in the final to win by a nose from Doc Parshall's colt, King's Counsel, which had finished third in the elimination dash.

Horses Prove Popular In Day Without Rubber Tires

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS — (AP) — With the tires getting thinner, and horses getting more and more in the public eye, here are a few words about the gallant steeds!

Despite the plea of Transportation Director Joseph Eastman that county fairs be called off for the duration, eight western Ohio expositions which feature the State Colt Racing association's stakes, will go on as usual.

The two and three-year-old trotters and pacers will perform at the following fairs: Fayette county, Washington C. H., July 28-31; Green county, Xenia, Aug. 4-8; Clinton county, Wilmington, Aug. 11-14; Miami county, Troy, Aug. 18-21; Darke county, Greenville, Aug. 23-28; Van Wert county, Van Wert, Sept. 7-11; Shelby county, Sidney, Sept. 15-18, and Logan county, Bellefontaine, Sept. 22-25.

For the Washington Courthouse events, 28 two-year-old and 29 three-year-old trotters, with 36 two-year-old and 34 three-year-old pacers, are paid up and eligible. The colts come from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, New York, Maryland and Maine.

Charles I Gordon of Greenville, secretary of the Ohio Colt Racing association, said purses for the baby racers would average $600, and that practically the same fields would appear at the eight fairs.

Should history reverse itself, and the horse replace the automobile, we hope you don't have as much trouble retaining a mount as had J P. (Pat) Conley, Columbus cafe owner and former semi-pro football fullback.

The racing bug bit Pat last fall, and he bought two runners. He shipped them to Louisville in February, and within 24 hours both were destroyed by fire. Pat bought four more oat-burners, and quartered them at Grove City, awaiting opening of the spring meeting at Beulah park. His four hopefuls were among 11 horses destroyed by flames there. Now he has six new ones, all racing at the Hamilton, O., meeting, under the "nom de course" of the Pink Elephant stable.

Army-Navy Relief day, scheduled Saturday, July 18, at Hamilton's track, is expected to toss another $10,000 into the service fund. All purses will be paid in war bonds, and all salaries in bonds and stamps, and the Ohio Sports Enterprises, Inc., which is conducting the meeting, will donate $3,000 from its end of the take.

Travelers Play Lorain

Open Home Season If Rain Stops Tonight.

Mansfield Travelers are booked to open their home park season at the Fairground this evening at 6:30, if it stops raining, meeting the Lorain Anchors.

The Lorain club, after losing a close game at the Reformatory several weeks ago, has been stepping along high, wide and handsome recently.

Here's a record for the past two weeks, as bleaned from the Lorain Journal: On June 30 a 10 to 1 victory over the Amherst Merchants in a Northern Ohio amateur league game; on July 2 an 11 to 2 victory over the Lorain Thew Shovel team; and on July 4, a 9 to 1 and 11 to 6 double victory over Ashtabula.

* * *

Probable lineup for the Anchors will be: Jaworski, cf, Costello, rf, Osko, ss, Filak, 2b, Boehler, 3b, Unger, lf, Kruppa, 1b, Klanchar, c, and Berens, p.

For the Travelers it will be: D Musille. lf, Smith, rf, W. Lockhart, 1b, Schaefer, ss, Bogantz, cf, Hamman, 3b, J. Musille, 2b, Heckert, c, and Patterson, p.

Umpires will be Darby Yarman behind the plate and George Allerdin on the bases.

Three Defeats Humble Blues

(By Associated Press)

Three straight defeats have cut Kansas City's lead to four games, but with only four contests left before the American association all-star game decision is made, there isn't much doubt that it will be the Blues against the rest of the league's aces in the midsummer classic.

Johnny Marcum turned in a four-hit pitching job for Toledo to beat Indianapolis, 2 to 1.

TELLS HOW DEAD JAP ZERO PILOT BAGGED BOMBER

U. S. Flier Saw Uncontrolled Plane Just Miss Him and Strike Other Plane.

By PAT ROBINSON
(INS Staff Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA—A grisly story of a Japanese Zero fighter, careening crazily through a formation of American bombers with its dead pilot slumped over the controls, was told today by Lieut. Gene Grauer of Milwaukee.

The uncontrolled Japanese fighter plane almost crashed into Grauer's ship, then swooped up into a following formation of four ships and smashed off the tail of a bomber. Both planes plunged into the sea.

"We were leading the first flight in an attack on Lae, the Jap base on northeast New Guinea," Lieut. Gauer related. "We were over our target and had just released a load of bombs, which started some big fires, when a bunch of Zeros attacked us.

"I was watching through the navigator's dome and saw one of the Jap fighters swing in toward us from above. A stream of bullets was poured at the Jap ship at least a hundred rounds hit the left wing and the cockpit of that Zero.

"The Jap pilot slumped over and there was no doubt that he was dead. But the ship still kept coming towards us—right on its course."

"My heart was in my mouth. Then the Zero began to careen crazily—still heading for us. I thought sure it was going to crash us.

"But at the last minute it swept below us and then swerved upward directly into our second formation which was flying behind and above us.

"The second flight leader was not so lucky as we had been. The uncontrolled Jap plane hit the bomber squarely from below and knocked off its tail. It was the end of the Zero which fell into the sea with a great splash.

"I watched the bomber almost with horror. It went into a spin and then began to plunge down toward the sea. I didn't see it hit the surface of the water, but I'm sure it must have.

"Right then we were too busy fighting off enemy ships and trying to dodge the Japanese anti-aircraft fire. We came through safely. But I can tell you I want no more dogfights with dead pilots."

MAGAZINE PRINTED IN PEN GUIDE TO PRISON INTELLECT

(By International News Service)

ATLANTA, Ga.—"A successful experiment in Americanism; proof that the intrinsic elements of democracy can live and breathe, and function under no-matter-what circumstances."

That, briefly, is a word picture of "The Atlantian," monthly magazine published by inmates of the U. S. Penitentiary at Atlanta, and the influence most largely responsible for moulding thought and guiding intellect among hundreds of thousands of men behind bars in America's prisons today.

To say that the Atlantian is a leader among prison magazines does not do it justice, for it really stands in a class alone. Its free and untrammeled expression of the thoughts of men whom society has found it necessary to deprive of their physical liberty, serves as a model for other penal publications, and imparts a new psychological approach to the age-old problem of making useful citizens of men once considered dangerous.

Driving spirit of the Atlantian and the theories it represents is vigorous, energetic, but mild-mannered and soft-spoken Joseph W. Sanford. Prison officials, noted educators making a close study of penology, and even inmates he supervises, call Warden Sanford one of the most able administrators in the field.

No run-of-the-mill stories on crime, or pages of lamentation bemoaning the present status of men who are its readers may be found in this publication. The general editorial policy as summed up by red-headed inmate-editor Morris Rudensky, declares:

"The Atlantian does not clutter its pages with worn-out diatribes on worn-out subjects, nor with commonplace recriminations against the traditional inconveniences of life behind bars . . . the Atlantian has no time nor space for aphoristic inspirational writings, admonitions to do better and keep cheerful, and watch for the silver lining. It assumes that its readers require a higher grade of intellectual fodder, and it gives it to them."

Assisting editor Rudensky as the Atlantian enters its fourth year of publication, is associate editor Richard Jordan, and the entire publication is actively supervised by Dr. George G. Killinger, Ph. D., Director of the penitentiary's extensive educational system.

Contributing greatly to the position the Atlantian holds in the magazine field is its one-man art department run by Nick Tag. With improvised equipment—a two-frame press which he made himself, Tag brings forth amazing designs in four colors via the silk-screen process.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Two new books about Mexico are now available in the Mansfield Public Library's children's department. Young readers who have enjoyed their trip to "Neighbor's Corners" as reading club members may wish to choose these books for further adventure in that direction.

CORTEZ AND THE CONQUEST OF MEXICO, by Diaz del Castillo—Long ago when Cortez and his Spanish soldiers were fighting the Aztecs in conquest of our neighbor to the south records were kept by eye-witnesses. One man who was one of Cortez' followers wrote his story when he was an old man. These accounts have been shortened and illustrated and put into this book for young readers. It is an exciting narrative for those who like a tale from history.

IN MEXICO THEY SAY, by Patricia Fent Ross—Fourteen new fairy tales from Mexico make up this gay book for middle-sized readers. The stories tell of saints and animals, princes and elves and the difficult words are explained at the end of the book. Colorful illustrations in keeping with the text and the settings make this collection a pleasure to examine.

RAF Flier Falls 1,000 Feet Into Flax Field, Lives

LONDON —(INS)— R. A. F. Flight-Sergeant Harry Gill, of Fitton Park, Southampton, Hampshire, England, considers himself to be one of the luckiest men alive in Britain today.

Returning to Britain from a raid on Germany Gill fell out of a plane without a parachute.

He dropped headlong 1,000 feet, and landed is a flax field.

British doctors think that being unconscious, Gill fell with all his muscles relaxed, and that this saved him from being killed.

COUNTY ROADS ALSO PERILED BY U. S. ORDER

All Bituminous Materials and Projects Subject to O. K. By Federal Government.

The federal order restricting the use of bituminous materials excepting in such cases as the Public Roads administration deems necessary for the prosecution of the war threatened to curtail Richland county's road program today.

An order, similar to that received recently by city officials in regard to the street program, informed County Engineer Howard C. Sword that the use of all bituminous materials on public roads and highways in Ohio and other states shall be deferred for the duration of the emergency unless given certification by the federal government.

Sword said that the order would effect the county program more in 1943 than it would this year. He said that the county had on hand about 70 per cent of the surface ceiling that it originally planned to use but that restrictions were felt in obtaining calcium chloride.

The county uses calcium chloride instead of road oil and has only about 20 per cent of the amount that it ordinarily buys.

Plans for new construction of any kind were tabled sometime ago Sword said, due to federal restrictions. The engineer's office had expected to recommend several different jobs to the county commissioners but they never came to a head, the engineers said.

The restraining order imperilled the city street program by delaying plans for the proposed resurfacing of Bartley, Glessner and Highland avenue and also for cooperation with the state highway departments in the improvement of portions of U. S. Route 42 and 42-A within the city. Several other city street projects are also likely to be delayed.

Hal G. Sours, state director of highways, has assured the county engineer's office that every effort will be made to handle applications promptly so that delays will be kept at a minimum.

DOTS, DASHES ADDED TO STUDY

BOSTON—(U.P.)—Dots and dashes have been added to the three R's at the Oliver Wendell Holmes grade school.

Five months ago assistant principal William F. Mahoney, an amateur radio operator, organized a club for study of radio code.

Now 15 students—two girls and 13 boys ranging in age from 11 to 14—can receive dot-dash messages at a seven-word-a-minute rate.

"Come to think of it, radio isn't such a far step from teaching history these days at the rate changes are being made," says Mahoney, a history teacher.

'FOE WE FACE,' BY HUSS, NEW ON LIBRARY LIST

Newsman in Berlin for 8 Years Gives Vivid Picture of Hitler, Henchmen.

Pierre J. Huss, who, for eight years was head of the Berlin bureau of the International News Service, gives an extraordinary vivid picture of Hitler and his henchmen in a new book, "The Foe We Face," now available at Mansfield Public Library.

Huss was the first man to interview Hitler after his rise to power and between his first interview and his last in November, 1941, he came to know Germany and the men who rule it intimately.

AMBASSADORS IN WHITE by Charles Morrow Wilson is the epic story of the battle medicine has waged and is waging against disease in the American tropics. The men—famous and unknown—who have been fighting an unheadlined war on the invisible deaths and diseases which make the countries to the south of us truly a "sick man's society" were our first and still our best ambassadors of good will. The story of what they have done—and how they did it—makes absorbing reading.

Captain Frederick Way, a river pilot and author of THE ALLEGHENY, tells in river language the crowded, fantastic story of the gleaming waterway from the days of the English traders and French explorers through the steamboat period and finally oil to the dramatic re-exploration voyage of Captain Tom Clarke and the story of how it affected flood control and navigation today. (The 17th in the Rivers of America Series.)

RUSSIANS DON'T SURRENDER by Alexander Poliakov is a dramatic firsthand account of the heroic guerrilla fighters—and of one unit in particular—who have pestered, hampered, driven back the so-called "invincible" German army during the past winter, and whose courage in the defense of their homeland has electrified the world.

Other Non-Fiction: Several new books on aeronautics are featured on this week's book list: AVIATION INSTRUMENT MANUAL; AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION, Molloy; RADIO NAVIGATION, Allan; AEROPLANE RADIO EQUIPMENT, Molloy; AEROPLANE AUXILIARY EQUIPMENT, Molloy; AEROPLANE INSTRUMENTS (Parts I and II) Molloy; LINCOLN AND HIS FRIENDS, Wilson; STRENGTH OF NATIONS, Soule; RUSSIA'S ECONOMIC FRONT FOR WAR AND PEACE, Yugow; FRESH-WATER BASS, Bergman.

W. Somerset Maugham in his new novel, THE HOUR BEFORE DAWN, unfolds the story of a typical English landed family in wartime: the Hendersons — the General, and his son, Roger; a younger boy, Jim, a conscientious objector; his wife, an Austrian refugee; and May, Roger's wife, in love with another man. A family in conflict, bound by strict honor to face its problems with conviction—this is the core of the book.

GENTLE ANNIE by MacKinlay Kantor, is a delightful novel of the west at the turn of the last century. Two people rode into Pahoka City on the S. C. & W. passenger train that September day. One of them was Rich Williams—he looked like an ordinary bum, but he carried a gun that people couldn't see. The other was a girl who descended timidly from the day coach. On the surface this is the story of a man sent to capture a gang of train robbers. But he ran into a lot of things he hadn't expected—including Gentle Annie.

HEAD OF THE LINE by Gladys Hasty Carroll contains a group of charming short stories—many of them about Maine and Maine people. They range from slight delicate sketches to more highly plotted tales. Those who have read "As the Earth Turns," or any other of her books will be sure to enjoy this collection of stories.

Other Fiction: MAJESTY'S RANCHO by Grey; KNIFE IN THE DARK by Cole; HOUSE IN THE DUST by Leslie.

GETS POSTOFFICE

SAN FRANCISCO—(U P)—With the expansion of the Pacific fleet, the navy has found it necessary to establish a naval postoffice.

The new U. S. fleet postoffice, covering 32 000 square feet, is adequate for serving a community of 100,000 people.

CHAPTER XXVIII

"I don't blame him. They shouldn't have promised if they can't deliver. How many days extension do they say they need?"

"Four. They say they can't make it a day earlier."

"Four days." Kay might have been saying, "Four centuries." Her brow was furrowed, her eyes stormy. "But this display is due to be shown the 24th. We can't release it unless we have the kettles on schedule. That would mean a week's delay for us."

"At least. That's what the boss is yelling about."

Kay said, her lips tight, "I'll talk with Mr. Nu. We must have the kettles and on the dot agreed for delivery, I'll go into one of the phone booths." She was conscious of office eyes, watching her narrowly.

In a few minutes she was back, stern but no longer stormy.

"We'll get them," she said, "on the date stipulated in the contract."

"Well I'll be darned!" Ed Ellis scratched his damp brow. "How did you do it?"

"I contacted the man who is handling our order. He's a good sort, remember? Sort of fatherly. I explained to him how much this order meant to me . . . it might mean my job. I used the feminine approach, practically threw myself on his mercy. Don't look at me that way, Mr. Ellis. I know what I did isn't cricket. But it's the truth. You know Mr. Burge. He dislikes women in his department. Such a let down might mean a two-weeks' notice in my pay envelope. That can't happen. I've got to go on earning. Heaven knows when or where I'd find another position. It isn't as though I were a skilled worker. I'm only an amateur, who's had a great lot of luck."

Ellis grinned. He said, "If you're an amateur, I'm an egg that hasn't hatched."

* * *

Kay sat down at her desk, prepared to swing into the day's routine. Mr. Burge was out of the office. She would tell him the kettle matter had been adjusted as soon as he returned.

The telephone on her desk buzzed.

"National Candy. Miss Kenyon speaking."

A woman's voice said, "Miss Kenyon, this is your hotel. A telegram just arrived for you. An immediate answer is requested. The boy is waiting. What would you like us to do?"

Somerset. Her mother. "Read it to me please." Her voice was far away. She gripped the receiver to keep it from clattering on her desk. The woman read:

"Come home at once. Your mother in bad shape. Wire reply. Hurry. Cora Kenyon."

Kay did not wait to close her desk. She pulled on her hat. Her bag—where did she keep her bag? —Oh yes, here in the top drawer.

Words danced before her eyes like flames. "Hurry." "Mother in bad shape." "Hurry." "Hurry."

But she couldn't leave this way, without notice, without explanation. She owed it to her employer to tell him why she must hurry. There was Mr. Burge now. He'd just come in. Hurry!

"Mr. Burge," she said, white and breathless, "I must go. At once the message said . . ."

Burge fixed Kay with a cold stare.

"Wait a minute, Miss Kenyon," he said. "Sit down." He pulled a chair to his desk. "What's this all about?"

Kay said, agonized, "Please don't ask me to sit down. I can't possibly. It's my mother Something has happened to her. She's ill, hurt, I don't know. I must get to her. I can't lose a second."

"You don't make sense Miss Kenyon," Burge said suspiciously —"Is your mother ill or is she injured? Surely you know."

"The message didn't say," Burge's cold stare pinioned Kay. "It said she is in bad shape, for me to come at once, to hurry. But I can't stand here explaining. I must hurry."

Burge's jaw snapped.

"Take it easy, Miss Kenyon," he said. "You are in the midst of a promotion project for National Candy. Only this morning one of your firms crawled out of their contract. We've spent money on your idea—plenty of it. What do you expect us to do? Throw it down the drain?"

"Oh Mr. Burge," she said miserably, "it isn't as bad as you say. Really it isn't. Louisiana Belles is well under way. Only a few details to be ironed out. I've taken care of Nu-Novelties and the miniature kettles. They'll be delivered on time, within the ten-day limit. Mr. Ellis knows as much about the display as I do. He can take over, do a better job than I could do. I'm sorry, but my mother—she's all I have."

"Very well, Miss Kenyon," Burge said. "You're another proof of what I've always held . . . women have no place in business. Too emotional. Something breaks and they lose their heads." Sign off at the desk in the employees' office as you go out."

"Thank you," Kay said and made for the exit. Her feet kept pace with her racing heart. She caught a taxi. The subway would be intolerable. She stopped at the desk of her hotel for the message. She read it again. It was even more ominous, at first hand.

"I'll be leaving as soon as I can pack," she told the clerk. "Please have my bill ready."

"Bad news?" the middle-aged woman on duty asked, solicitously.

"I'm afraid . . . yes." Kay's lips quivered.

"That's too bad. Anything we can do for you? I could get off for say 15 minutes. The cashier'd watch the desk for me. Maybe I could help you pack."

Kay said, "I've only a few things. They won't take a minute. It's kind of you to offer." People were kind, working people. There was a fraternity in work.

On the way up in the elevator Kay thought, "I'll phone Ronnie. He'll know the short cuts, and the shortest way home. And pray heaven he's in."

Kay's prayer was answered. Ronnie was in.

"What is it, Red?" he wanted to know. "You sound like the roof's fallen in."

"It has," Kay said. "I had a wire from Aunt Cora. Something's happened to mother. I must get home, what's the quickest way?"

A brief pause then Ronnie said, "There's a plane at 1 o'clock this afternoon. LaGuardia field. I'll attend to everything. Pick you up at quarter to 12."

"I'll be in the lobby, waiting. Don't be late. Oh Ronnie . . ."

"Now, now, nothing's happened yet. Keep the chin up. I'll be seeing you."

"Flight No. 16. Flight No. 16." came from the loud speaker at the airport.

Ronnie said, "Here we go." He walked with Kay toward the enclosure. "Nice ship. The weather's right, too. Now up the gangplank. Here we are. Seat four. And eight. As usual, I'm right behind you. Comfortable?"

"Ronnie," Kay said, aware that the plane was about to take off. "You're staying on? You're going with me?"

Ronnie said as casually as though they were on a city bus, "I most certainly am going with you. You don't think I'd let you roam around in the blue alone, feeling as you do? Beside, flying's my dish. I never miss a chance to take off at the slightest excuse. Lean back and close your eyes. Fly with the ship. Don't try to buck it. We'll be up in the lane in a minute and zooming along as smooth as a ribbon."

A long silence, longer than Kay realized. She was exhausted, physically and emotionally. Time ceased to exist for her. Then suddenly, she was sitting erect, fumbling a piece of paper in her pocket. The telegram. That was why she was here, winging through the sky, hurrying, hurrying—toward what?"

"Ronnie," Kay said, reaching back to pass him the piece of paper, "read this, will you? Tell me what you think it means?"

Ronnie scanned the message, then read it slowly.

"I don't know," he said, leaning forward. "Funny that shewolf Cora didn't let you know what it's all about. She knew what this would do to you. It's like her though. God how that woman loves to put on the screws! Try to rest until we land. The stronger you are the more you can give to whatever you have to do."

"Ronnie, you've changed. You're so much more . . . more."

"Substantial? High time. A fellow as far away from his rompers as I am ought to put on long pants. Try relaxing, Red. It's what you need. I've a snack of news for you. May help you take your mind off that S. O. S. from your Aunt Cora. Look Red, this is absolutely your last chance to become the wife of a future American hero. You're sure you won't marry me?"

Kay said, genuine regret clouding her eyes, "I'm scorry, Ron. You're such a grand . . ."

"Guy?"

"Um-huh. Such a grand guy. I like you so much, Ron, I'm terribly fond of you. But love—that has to be different, doesn't it? Love doesn't ask you for your heart—it takes possession of your heart, commands you to follow. There's no denying that command."

"It's that engineer fellow?"

"I'm afraid—that is, I think it is."

"I thought so." Ronnie squared his shoulders, shook himself like a puppy shaking off the rain. "But don't look so glum about it, sister." he said returning to his tone of banter. "He's a grand guy too. He's your sort, Kay. Me, I'm kind of a rover, have trouble keeping my feet on the ground. So what? So I'm taking myself for a ride. I've found myself a new sweetheart, sister. Airplane. I've got a date to fly for our Uncle Sam. You know I'm a pretty fair pilot, or do you? Well, I am and I'm going to be a better one. I'm going to be tops on taking those birds through the air. Maybe it's just as well you gave me the 'No' sign, sister, because ever since I got that notice saying there's a place for me on the beam I've been suffering from a bad case of claustrophobia. You know, like I was shut in and had to batter my way out or bust.

"A gal like you wouldn't want to get a wire from her husband in Pernambuco saying he'll be home a year from next Christmas if his wings hold out. Hey, maybe I'll find me one of those senoritas down Rio way, one with rings in her ears and fire in her eye. It's worth looking into."

"Ronnie! You mean you're actually going to be a pilot—you're going to be in the Air Corps?"

"I don't mean nothin' else. And don't tell me you're changing your mind about taking me on as a permanent fixture — remember I haven't won that pretty uniform yet. I'm just one of the birds who's trying to rate it."

Kay laughed, warmly. "I'm so glad for you," she said, "so proud you've the spirit to grow wings."

"Hold it," Ronnie warned. "I'm not Uncle Sam's little bird yet, but I will be—or else. Next to you, give me a plane. And now I think it over up here in this cloud bank we're going through, maybe you're second choice."

Ronnie's car met them at the airport. It was a 50-mile drive from there to Somerset. Ronnie took the wheel. They tore through the night.

"They're expecting you?" Ronnie asked, taking a curve expertly, but dangerously.

"Why—why—no." Kay's mind was whirling again. "I . . . I . . . never even wired. It didn't seem important. The only important thing was to get home—to get to mother."

"Right. We'll be there in nothing flat. Light me a cigaret, will you, Red? I want to keep my paws on the wheel."

* * *

Kay lit the cigaret, placed it between Ronnie's lips. They were flying again—through the countryside. Now, the old familiar road. The old familiar street. The houses she knew so well—in a blur.

Past the Sweet shop. It had been the center of Kay's universe. Now it was nothing more than a dash of light. Closer now.

"All set?" Ronnie took his foot off the gas.

Kay said, through the ache in her throat, through dry lips, "Yes. All set. Keep going."

A spurt. A turn. Into the worn drive, with the scuffed white house at the end of it. Around the curve. The car slid to a grinding stop.

* * *

There was a light in the hall. A dim light. No one was in sight. Kay was out of the car in a flash, racing up the steps.

"Daughter!"

"Mumsy!" Kay's arms were around the small figure, pressing it to her. "What is it? I came as fast as ever I could. Oh Mums, what is it? I should never have left you. Mummy, Mummy!"

"Why daughter!" Ellen managed to extricate herself from the encircling arms. "What in the world? Aren't you well? Has something happened to you?"

(To Be Continued)

"Canteen" comes from the French "cantine," which means "a place where food and drink are sold to school children, prisoners or soldiers."

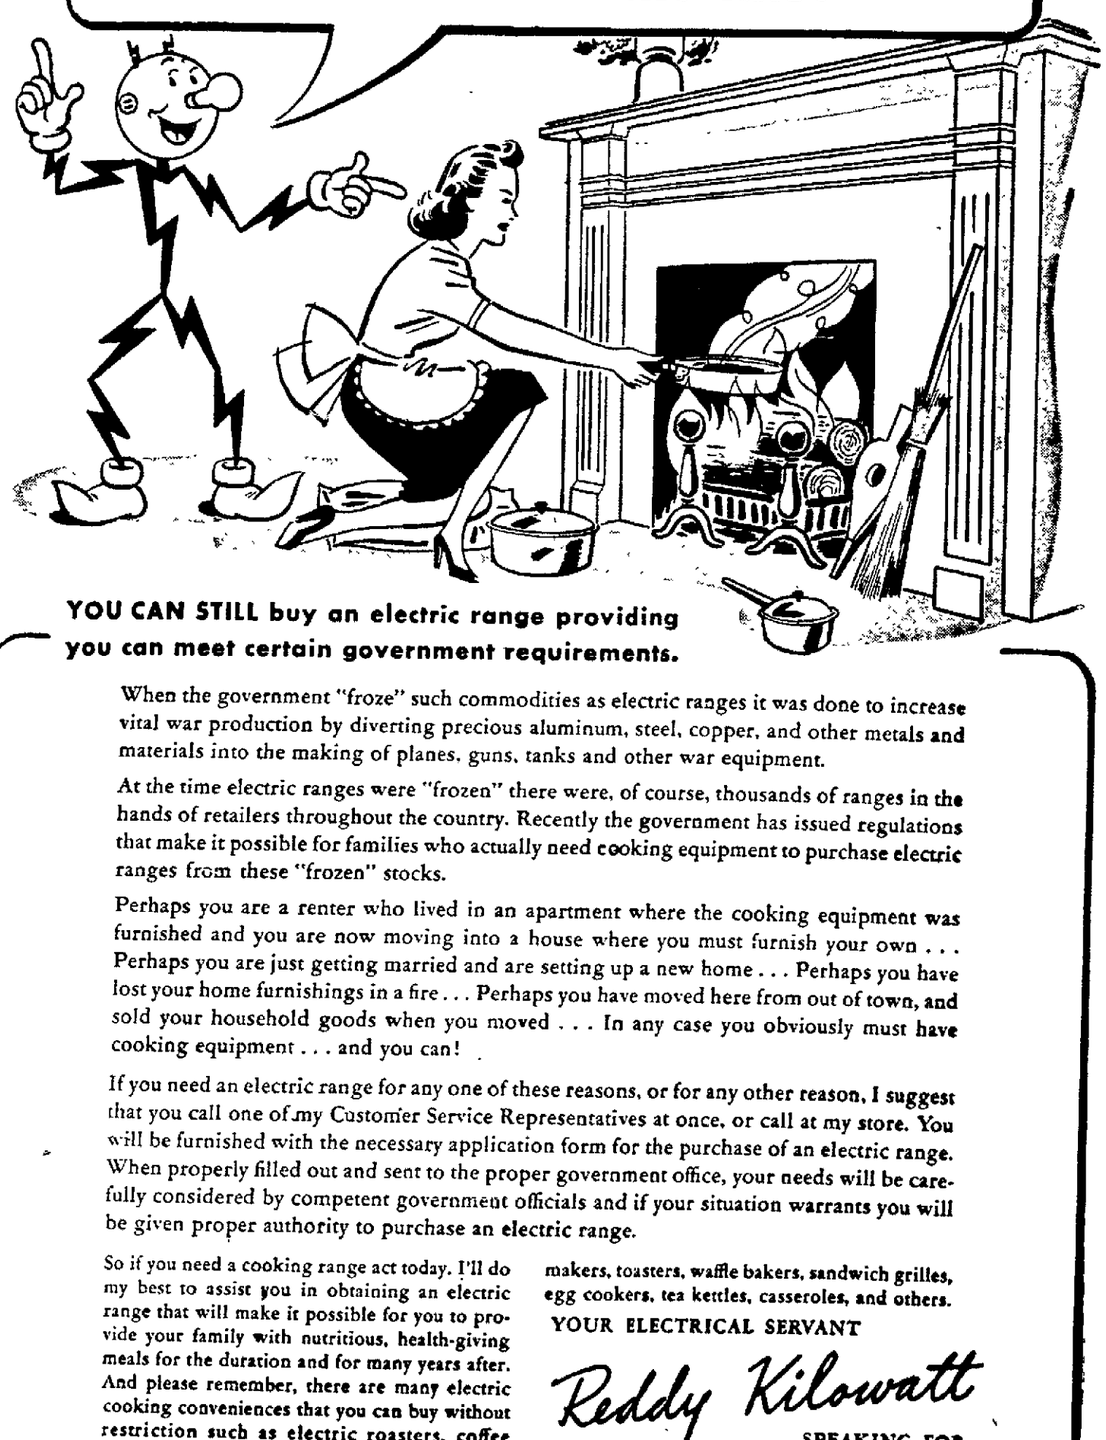
NO KIDDING.. No one expects YOU to cook like this!


YOU CAN STILL buy an electric range providing you can meet certain government requirements.
When the government "froze" such commodities as electric ranges it was done to increase vital war production by diverting precious aluminum, steel, copper, and other metals and materials into the making of planes, guns, tanks and other war equipment.
At the time electric ranges were "frozen" there were, of course, thousands of ranges in the hands of retailers throughout the country. Recently the government has issued regulations that make it possible for families who actually need cooking equipment to purchase electric ranges from these "frozen" stocks.
Perhaps you are a renter who lived in an apartment where the cooking equipment was furnished and you are now moving into a house where you must furnish your own . . . Perhaps you are just getting married and are setting up a new home . . . Perhaps you have lost your home furnishings in a fire . . . Perhaps you have moved here from out of town, and sold your household goods when you moved . . . In any case you obviously must have cooking equipment . . . and you can!
If you need an electric range for any one of these reasons, or for any other reason, I suggest that you call one of my Customer Service Representatives at once, or call at my store. You will be furnished with the necessary application form for the purchase of an electric range. When properly filled out and sent to the proper government office, your needs will be carefully considered by competent government officials and if your situation warrants you will be given proper authority to purchase an electric range.
So if you need a cooking range act today. I'll do my best to assist you in obtaining an electric range that will make it possible for you to provide your family with nutritious, health-giving meals for the duration and for many years after. And please remember, there are many electric cooking conveniences that you can buy without restriction such as electric roasters, coffee makers, toasters, waffle bakers, sandwich grilles, egg cookers, tea kettles, casseroles, and others.

DOCTOR'S LAST WISH GRANTED; BILLS VOIDED

But Even at Height of His Career He Charged Only 50 Cents Per Call.

By ROSCOE TREIER
(INS Staff Correspondent)

"The good men do lives after them . . ."

A week ago Dr. Charles D. Watkins, 78, beloved by all 1091 residents of Etna, Licking county, died following 55 years as a practicing physician Many good deeds were to his credit during his lifetime and just before he died, a last wish was that all bills owed him by his patients—some for many years—be cancelled outright.

During the height of his career, his largest fee per call was 50 cents—that to rich and poor alike. If the financially depressed were unable to pay, Dr. Watkins said, "Pay me if you ever get the money and don't need it," reports his daughter, Mrs. Irma V. Rector, of Columbus.

The kindly physician, a graduate of the old Ohio Medical college four years before the turn of the century, was a baseball pitcher of some note and enthusiastic hunter in his day. He served as Licking county representative in the Ohio legislature in 1905 and 1906 and from 1907 to 1909 was a member of the state senate.

Yes, "The good men do . . ."

Anr speaking of physicians, Toledo has one who deserves comment. Dr. Albert Marks, born on the Atlantic ocean when his parents were en route to America from England, this week observed his 100th birthday. He practiced medicine in Toledo until he was 92 years old, having launched his medical career in Milbury, Wood county, more than 50 years ago.

PROFIT SALES CUT DOWN ON MARKET RALLY

Merchandising Gets Boost Out of Public Splurge on Pocketbook.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Profit selling on the recent rally was a bit more insistent in today's stock market proceedings and many leaders inclined to slip.

Reports of improvement in public spending during the past week were noted by holders of merchandising shares. While retail dollar volume for the country as a whole was placed by Dun & Bradstreet at 4 to 7 per cent under the comparable week a year ago, the decline was less than in a number of previous weeks.

Confirmation of the flattening out of the recently downward mercantile curve was furnished by the federal reserve board which estimated department store sales for the nation last week were 1 per cent lower than in the like 1941 period. In the preceding week the year-to-year recession was 8 per cent.

Thomas said he had no doubt that a limitation such as that suggested would be adopted and predicted the committee would make "rather liberal" increases in OPA operating funds over the $75,000,000 previously voted by the house.

Henderson was reported to have asked for a minimum of $140,000,000 with which to employ a staff of from 55,000 to 57,000 persons, warning that the price control job could not be done satisfactorily with a smaller number.
